TWO OFFICERS OF NAVY, CAPITAL MEN, DROWN AS SHIP'S GIG HITS BARGE

Three Seamen Also Dead as Result of Crash Off Panama.

BOAT ON WAY BACK TO TENDER WHITNEY

Capt. Ralph Griswold, of World War Fame, One of Wreck Victims.

ARTHUR WRENN, PAY CLERK, LOSES LIFE

Bodies of Washington Men Recovered; Efforts at Rescue Are Futile.

Two naval officers, both of Washington, and three enlisted men were drowned yesterday off Balboa, Canal Zone, when a motor-powered gig in which they were riding from shore to the destroyer tender Whitney collided with a towed barge and sank, according to reports received early last night by the Navy Department.

The dead:

Capt. Ralph Griswold, 2435 Wisconsin avenue northwest, commanding officer of the Ninth Destroyer Scouting Squadron.

Herbert D. McDowell, seaman, of Jacksonville, Fla.

Earl T. Tibbetts, fireman, of Haverhill, Mass.

Whitney's Commander Saved.

Capt. William J. Giles, commanding officer of the Whitney, another passenger in the gig, narrowly escaped death, but was rescued, according to Navy Department information.

The department also announced that bodies of Capt. Griswold and Wrenn were recovered.

No cause for the collision was given in reports reaching the Navy Department.

The accident occurred when Capt. Griswold, Petty Officer Wrenn, Capt. Giles and another officer were returning from a trip ashore in the gig, which was manned by Coxswain Schweineberg, Seaman McDowell, Fireman Tibbetts and other seamen. The gig struck the barge, which was being towed by the canal tug Marriner.

The gig was off the Whitney, and the report of the tragedy was made to the department by the commanding officer of that vessel.

Received Commission in 1902.

Capt. Griswold was a graduate of the Naval Academy, having received his commission in the service in 1902. He had lived in Washington with his family for nine years up to September 1 last year, when he was transferred from his post with naval operations to the command of the Ninth Destroyer Division. He was 47 years old, and is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ethel Sharp Griswold, and two daughters, Misses Nancy and Elizabeth, who reside at the Wisconsin avenue address. Both he and his widow formerly lived in Worcester, Mass.

Capt. Griswold served for eighteen months during the World War and made a heroic record. He was commander of the transport Kroonland, and was awarded the Navy Cross for meritorious service.

Capt. Griswold was a native of Pennsylvania, but moved to Massachusetts when a youth, and it was from that State that he was appointed to the Naval Academy. He entered the institution in 1898.

Wrenn Native of Capital.

Petty Officer Wrenn was the son of A. C. Wrenn, chief clerk, Bureau of Engineering, Navy Department. He was a native of Washington, having been born here 31 years ago. In addition to his father, he is survived by his widow and a 20-month-old son, both of whom are ill with influenza at Fall River, Mass.

Wrenn had been in the Navy for a number of years, and at the time of his death was about to complete his tour of sea duty.

News of the death of Capt. Griswold, which was received late yesterday afternoon from official sources, was a great blow to Mrs. Griswold. She had retired to her room last night, but close friends who were admitted to her presence stated that she was bearing up under her grief in traditional Navy manner. Mrs. Griswold not only was the wife of a sailor but is the daughter of Col. Thomas Sharp, U. S. A.

No information was available last night as to when the bodies of Capt. Griswold and Wrenn would be returned to the United States. It is expected that their return will be expedited and that military services will be held at Arlington Cemetery.

Navy Department officials were without information last night as to whether a Navy board of inquiry had been convened to inquire into the accident. It was presumed, however, that an official investigation would be made.

Harris & Ewing.

HOOVER OFF TODAY FOR REST IN MIAMI

Has Settled Some of Cabinet Problems in Conferences Here, Leaders Believe.

WORK IS GOING WITH HIM

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

President-elect Hoover leaves at 10:30 this morning for the tropical serenity of Miami Beach, where he will prepare his first message to Congress and give the final touches to his Cabinet. He will be accompanied by Chairman Hubert I. Work, of the Republican national committee, and J. Francis Burke, general counsel of the committee, the latter of whom is expected to stop off at Palm Beach for a rest.

Ordinarily the winter letter of Florida's east coast would not be selected by a man confronted with profound thought, but it will be comparative seclusion for Mr. Hoover after his hectic two weeks in Washington. On the J. C. Penney estate, protected by a causeway from Miami and Miami Beach, he will have rest when he wants it and only such visitors as may seriously want to see him.

Mr. Hoover, accompanied by Mrs. Hoover and Larry S. Richey, yesterday afternoon visited Shenandoah National Park in Virginia, and this inevitably led to reports that the President-elect was looking over possible sites for a summer White House. It was explained, however, that Mr. Hoover is accustomed to taking long automobile rides and that this is what he was doing yesterday.

Mr. Richey several weeks ago made a tour through this section, but it was said he was interested only in looking over favorable fishing streams for the President-elect.

It is believed that it will be in Florida that he will confer with those whom he wants to comprise his official family and to take over other important tasks in his administration. Some of this work has undoubtedly been touched upon in his two weeks in Washington, but in so far as definite

WINCHESTER POLICE SLAY SAFE-DRILLER

RECENT CRIMES SIMILAR

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 20.—Caught in the act of drilling a safe combination with hammer and chisel early today, Charles F. King, 39, secretary-treasurer of the local Loyal Order of Moose Lodge, was shot and killed by Assistant Chief of Police C. W. Hollis in the office of the J. S. Haldeman Creamery.

King had apparently knocked the receiver off a nearby desk telephone while hammering on the safe and the drilling attracted the attention of a telephone operator, who notified the police. Hollis and Patrolman John Massey found King had succeeded in forcing the safe open when they arrived, and, when called upon to come out, they said he ran toward the rear of the main building. As Massey hastened to prevent his escape, Hollis fired two shots, one taking effect in the right leg and the other in the arm. Although wounded twice, King turned around, seized a hammer and was advancing on Hollis when the latter shot him in the neck, the bullet taking a downward course and lodging near the heart. King slumped and died almost instantly.

Earlier in the night a safe in the office of the Winchester Steam Laundry was broken open, but officials said it contained no money. The creamery and laundry office safes were rifled in a similar way several months ago. About the same time the safe in the office of the Winchester Wholesale Grocery Co., where King was employed as a shipping clerk, was also broken open and robbed of several hundred dollars. Half a dozen other office safes have been rifled in much the same manner the past year.

King, who has no family here, came here three years ago from Germantown, Pa., where he is said to have a sister.

Mummy of Favorite Wife Of Solomon Found, Report

London, Jan. 20 (A.P.).—The Daily Mail tomorrow will print Cairo dispatches citing the newspaper Al Mokattam as authority for the story of the sensational discovery in Jerusalem of the mummy of the favorite wife of King Solomon. She was an Egyptian who died under tragic circumstances.

The burial chamber just laid bare is said to exceed in magnificence the famous one of King Tut-ankh-amen. It is filled with objects of beauty and great value, including a golden coffin which revealed the body wrapped in richest coverings set with precious stones. The fingers bore several rings and at the head was a crown set with sapphires, emeralds and pearls.

With the body was a Hebrew parchment scroll, believed to be in the handwriting of King Solomon, relating the manner of his wife's death and extolling her virtues. This account said that the wife, whose name was Moti Maris, died in the thirty-sixth year of Solomon's reign and was buried beneath her palace, "after having sacrificed herself for her husband and sovereign and lord."

The scroll further relates that in recognition of his deep love for her and her loyalty and self-sacrifice, Solomon with his own hands placed on her forehead a magnificent crown presented to him by his people on the twenty-fifth anniversary of his accession.

The scroll says that three years before the death of Moti Maris her father, Amento, came from Egypt laden with presents, but with his heart full of malice, with the intention of dethroning Solomon and seizing the country in behalf of the King of Egypt. One day Amento sought an interview with Solomon, having previously ordered Moti to poison the wine of the king.

The scroll concludes: "When Moti entered bearing cups and wine I noticed that she was deadly white, but did not suspect treachery. When Moti poured out the wine in cups I noticed that Amento did not hold out his hand for his cup. Nevertheless, still unsuspecting, I raised the cup to my lips. Moti, who was standing beside me, instantly snatched the cup and drank the contents herself. For a few minutes she remained standing,

Record Dash Results in the Quick Removal of All Passengers Aboard.

New York, Jan. 20 (U.P.).—The Dollar liner President Garfield, which left New York Thursday on a cruise around the world, lay in the Little Bahama Shoals off the coast of Florida tonight, hard stuck both fore and aft.

Near by was the Munson liner Pan America, under command of Capt. Rose, which had taken aboard all passengers from the mudbound vessel just as dusk fell on the Florida Strait.

Answering a distress call sent out at 7:25 a. m. by Capt. T. P. Quinn, of the President Garfield, the Pan America turned from her coastwise route to carry out one of the quickest and most skillfully managed rescues in the heavily burdened annals of the sea.

Capt. Rose brought his vessel alongside the Dollar liner at about 4 p. m., after racing to the position off Point Jupiter under forced draft. At 6 p. m. he informed the United Press by radio that passengers, mail and baggage had been transferred from the stranded ship to the Pan America.

No Immediate Danger.

"We are standing by," his terse message read. "There is no immediate danger. Weather is good."

There were 81 passengers and approximately 200 members of the crew aboard the President Garfield when she left New York for her first port of call, Havana.

The radio message, sent at daybreak and asking for assistance, started what apparently was a clocklike rescue. The United States Coast Guard cutter Yamacraw started for the position given in the President Garfield's radio message.

The Pan-America's radio operator picked up the signals and the S. S. Voltaire, sister ship of the S. S. Vestris, which sank off the Virginia Capes recently with great loss of life, heard of the accident at about the same time. There was a hurried, crackling exchange of radio messages between the Voltaire and the Pan-America.

The latter vessel, however, was closest to the position of the President Garfield and proceeded to the scene, while the Voltaire continued her voyage.

Pan-America Arrives.

A few hours later the President Garfield informed the Coast Guard headquarters by radio:

"We are all fixed. The Pan-America is expected alongside shortly after 4 p. m. No danger."

The rescue vessel reported next, in a message intercepted by the Radio Marine Corporation:

"Sighted the President Garfield. Will take off passengers in half an hour."

Apparently without a single hitch, the Pan-America steamed into the calm waters of the vast Bahama Banks to the side of the Dollar liner. At 5:50 p. m. the master of the President Garfield radioed to the United Press that the Pan-America was alongside, at the Matinella Shoals, where the Dollar liner was fast.

"Passengers, baggage and mail transferred to the Pan-America at 4 p. m.," Capt. Quinn said. "All is well. Fine, smooth weather."

Naval Vessels on Way.

Key West, Fla., Jan. 20 (U.P.).—Five naval vessels from south Atlantic ports were steaming to the assistance of the Dollar liner President Garfield, aground on Mantilla Shoals, 75 miles east of Fort Pierce, tonight. A radio message received at the naval wireless station here reports that the ship is in no immediate danger, and that her passengers and mail were taken off by the Pan-America, which arrived alongside at 4 p. m.

The Navy tug Umpqua, bound for Key West from Charleston, has been ordered to proceed to the assistance of the disabled ship. The wrecking tug Warbler was ordered out of Jacksonville and the Coast Guard cutter Yamacraw out of Savannah also is steaming to the assistance of the liner.

Plane Propeller Cuts Tail Off Cow in Field

Pana, Ill., Jan. 20 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Richard Lemon, flying instructor at the Pana Airport, in making a landing this afternoon with two Pana business men in a 10-acre field north of Nokomis, 6 miles west of Pana, cut off a cow's tail with the airplane propeller, which he brought back to Pana as evidence of his unusual experience. The propeller was wrecked.

Bossie was lying down in the field and became frightened at the machine skimming along the ground, and ran directly in front of it. Aside from the loss of her tail, she was uninjured.

CRUISER BILL'S DEFEAT LOOMS, SENATORS FEAR

Concentrated Move Under Way to Kill Measure, Oddie Says.

CONFERENCE REPORTS WILL HALT IT, BELIEF

Hale Plans to Make Fight This Week to Get Act Out of Pocket; Foes Assured.

By ALBERT W. FOX.

America's national defense program, involved in the cruiser bill, now appears to be in real danger, as a result of a combination of circumstances which is playing directly into the hands of the pacifists, foreign and domestic. The cruiser bill is the unfinished business before the Senate, and events during the next two or three days will demonstrate whether or not it is to remain the very much unfinished business when the short session adjourns on March 4.

Senator Hale, in charge of the bill, will this week undertake to rescue the bill from the legislative pocket into which it has been maneuvered. Senator Oddie, second ranking Republican member of the naval affairs committee, regards the sidetracking of the bill as part of a concerted move to prevent its passage until the time is reached for the filibuster, backed by the group of senators who are relied upon by the farflung pacifist and internationalist organizations.

"I think I am pretty safe in saying that such a concerted move is in operation," Senator Oddie said last night, "though of course I am not reflecting on any senator."

Would Assure Pacifist Victory.

Utilization of appropriation conference reports as an excuse for keeping the Navy bill out of consideration is to be the corner stone of the anti-Navy strategy, according to whispered admissions.

If Senator Hale can be persuaded to give way to every such conference report and to refrain from attempting to bring up the Navy bill during the progress of these "conference report discussions" the pacifists' victory will be assured, it is forecast.

A motion to bring up a conference report is privileged and can be made at any time. This does not mean that the Navy bill need be displaced by the motion nor does it mean that a motion can not be made to bring up the Navy bill and thereby break into the hours of debate consumed in seemingly endless discussion of prohibition and other matters which are to be used as time-consuming tactics.

But the idea is being fostered that it would not be polite to break into discussions which concern conference reports, and on this principle it is hoped by the pacifists that the cruiser bill may continue in its present role of being the "perpetual unfinished business" of the Senate.

With six more weeks of Congress prior to adjournment and with more than two-thirds of the senators behind the bill, there would seem to be little reason to seriously consider the open boasts of the internationalists and pacifists that they have already won their fight against the American Navy.

Even Chance for Passage.

But, curious as it may be, even the stanchest supporters of the adequate defense program are beginning to privately concede that the outlook is grow-

Fliers Crash After Search for 4 Boys

All Expected to Recover; Missing Hunters Feared Lost in Marshes.

Wilmington, N. C., Jan. 20 (A.P.).—Three men, returning from a search over the Brunswick River marshes for four missing boy hunters, were seriously injured here today when their plane crashed in landing, but tonight it was said that all probably would recover.

The men were Capt. Fred Kreuberg, former German flying officer, who suffered a fractured skull; Deputy Sheriff Carl Cook, whose back was broken, and Otto Schmidt, who suffered internal injuries.

No trace of the missing party of hunters was found after long sweeps over the marsh land, and the plane had abandoned the search when it fell at the Wilmington airport. Members of the lost party, for whom little hope is held now, are Jesse Huggins, Randolph Huggins, Elliott Huggins and Fred Englert, all of Wilmington.

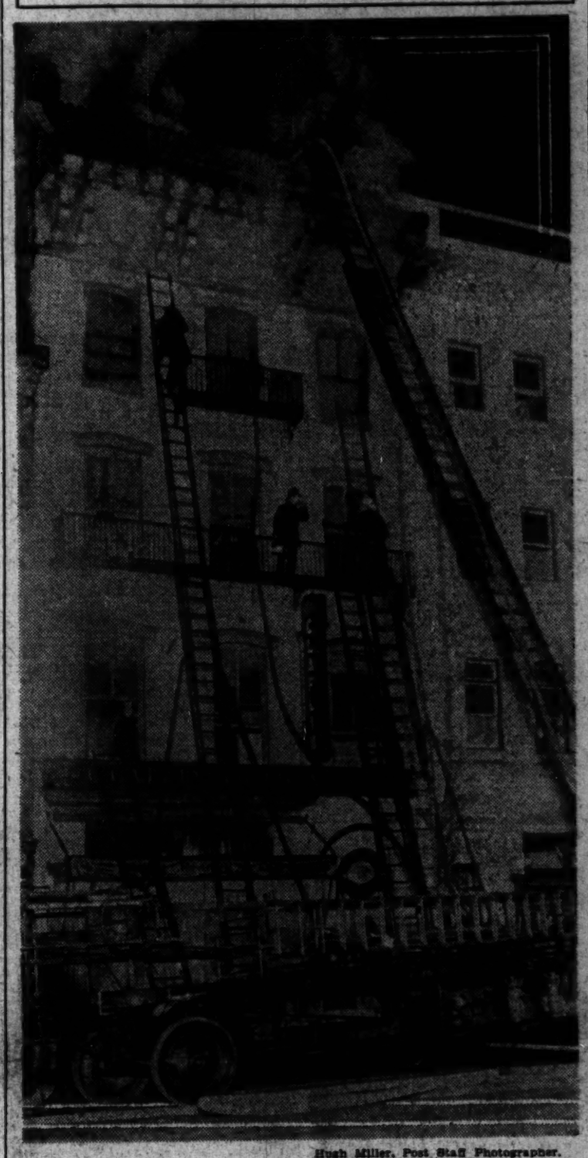
VICTIMS BEING CARRIED TO STREET



Hugh Miller, Post Staff Photographer.

Thrilling rescues and escapes marked the fire which early yesterday morning swept the upper floors of the building at 922 Fourteenth street northwest. A bedridden invalid and six children were among the dozen persons carried to safety by the firemen.

Woman Invalid and Six Small Children Are Among Rescued.

BUILDING IN FLAMES WHEN CITIZEN SEES IT

Victims Are Carried Out in Night Clothes; All Property Is Lost.

FATHER, FOOT HURT, GETS OUT HIS FAMILY

Origin Is Mystery, but Belief Is it Started in Optical Company's Store.

Awakened shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday morning to find themselves trapped on the upper floors of a blazing building, three families, which included an invalid and six small children, were carried in the nick of time to safety from their apartments at 922 Fourteenth street northwest as flames swept through the building and consumed all their belongings except the thin night clothes on their backs.

Thrilling rescues and escapes were made at the rear of the building, while at the same time heroic but futile efforts were being made to enter the blazing building from the front. Firemen arriving in response to the first alarm immediately noted the headway that the fire had made and a second alarm was turned in at once.

Those who were rescued were Jules Vaugon, 58 years old, of the firm of Leon & Jules, hairdressers, of 1322 H street northwest, and his invalid wife, Mrs. Lucie Vaugon; Thomas Foren, 36, his wife, Ella, 36, and two children, Paul ("Buddy") Foren, 6, and Margaret Foren, 2, and James E. Thompson, 42 years old; his wife, Mary, 36, and four daughters, Betty, 7; Doris, 6; Mary Jane, 4, and Esther, 6 months.

Injured Father Saves Two.

Two of the Thompson children and Mrs. Vaugon were carried down the fire escape by Sergt. Murchel ("Mike") Lamp, of Engine Company No. 14, while the other two Thompson children and Mrs. Thompson were carried to safety by other members of the company.

Mr. and Mrs. Foren managed to carry their two children safely down the fire escape without aid, in spite of the fact that Foren's right foot was incapacitated and bandaged as a result of a recent injury.

First knowledge of the fire, which was of undetermined origin, but which is believed to have started in the ground-floor store occupied by the Claflin Optical Co., was gained by Foren when he was awakened by the heavy smoke and intense heat that swept his apartment.

Foren ran to a front window of his apartment in the fourth floor and called out the alarm in a voice that was heard for several blocks in the early morning stillness. His cries awakened tenants in neaby buildings and attracted the attention of W. E. S. Tipton, 38 years old, of 658 F street northeast, who was passing at the time, and Policeman Lewis C. Harkins, of the First Precinct, who was patroling his beat two blocks away.

Unable to Find Tenants.

Harkins ran to the scene, and upon his arrival smoke was pouring from the building and the glare of the flames was plainly visible. The officer rushed to a fire alarm box on the corner and, seeing that it had already been pulled, went back to the building and broke in the front door with a view of rescuing the trapped families. When he reached the stairway, however, he found it burned through and crumbling.

In the meantime Tipton, who is employed in a nearby store and knew that there were many children in the building, had shed his coats and hat and was preparing to scale the front wall. As Harkins retreated from the flames

PRISONER WELL GUARDED

While John Francis McAuliffe, a policeman assigned to the Seventh Precinct, and Samuel "Shorty" Jenkins, of 1213 Thirty-fourth street northwest, lingered between life and death yesterday at Georgetown Hospital, Jenkins, who shot McAuliffe and then tried to kill himself, was formally charged by police with assault with intent to murder.

McAuliffe, shot by the drink-crazed Jenkins when he went to the latter's home to investigate reports of a disturbance there, is given but a slim chance of recovering from the .45-caliber bullet wounds. He has been given two blood transfusions by fellow policemen of the Seventh Precinct.

Jenkins, who at first was believed to have a good chance to recover from the

TUCSON IS REACHED BY QUESTION MARK

FLIERS ON VOYAGE HERE

Tucson, Ariz., Jan. 20 (U.P.).—The Army plane Question Mark and its convoying refueling plane landed at Tucson at 4 p. m. today on the first lap of its San Diego to Washington trip. The flight from the coast was made in five hours, bucking a head wind the entire distance.

Approximately 6,000 persons, headed by city officials, greeted the crews of the planes.

Maj. Spatz announced an early take-off for Midland, Tex., on Monday morning on the second leg of the flight.

The monoplane, holder of the world's sustained flight record, left Rockwell Field, San Diego, at 10 a. m., accompanied by the refueling ship. Other stops will be made at Midland

Dry Millions Useless Until Capital Is Arid, Howard Says

Congress Must Clean Up Own Back Yard Before Appropriations to Enforce Law Elsewhere Will Gain Approval of Washington Committee.

Not until Congress dries up its own back yard will the 20 Protestant and Catholic organizations represented by Clinton N. Howard favor appropriation of additional funds for prohibition enforcement, Howard yesterday told an audience in Calvary Baptist Church.

"Any proposal of the wets to appropriate $250,000,000 to enforce prohibition is a farce on its face, and any proposal of the drys to appropriate $25,000,000 while the Capital is wet is inconsistent, to say the least," Howard declared.

"We do not favor the appropriation of another dollar by Congress to enforce the prohibition law in the rest of the country until Congress provides legislation and an appropriation that will make it possible for Supt. Hesse to enforce the prohibition law in Washington."

Howard is chairman of the National United Committee for Law Enforcement, and for 40 years has been prominently identified with the prohibition cause. His address yesterday, one of a series in a campaign the committee is conducting to "dry up" the Capital by March 4, was approved by Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot, wife of the former governor of Pennsylvania, who also addressed the audience.

In light of the request of Bishop James Cannon, jr., of Virginia, that Secretary Mellon withdraw his an-

Tipton shouted for a boost up the wall, which the officer gave him, and thereafter Tipton went upward like a steeplejack, crashing in windows on each floor and peering in for the trapped ones until he had reached the fourth and top floor.

By this time the Fire Department had arrived, and threw a ladder against the wall to the nearly exhausted volunteer. Tipton shouted down that he could find no signs of any one in the building, but that he knew there were people in there and that they must have been forced to the rear.

The firemen ordered Tipton and a young man whose identity is not known, but who followed Tipton part way up the wall, to come down the ladder. They then threw in streams of water from the front while rescue efforts were concentrated in the rear.

Tipton, after a breath-taking moment on the ground, pushed to the front door of the blazing building to save the children. Nearby policemen rushed in after him and dragged him to safety.

Firemen Rescue Children.

The rescue operations were led by Sergt. Lamp, and the coats of firemen and policemen were thrown over the nearly naked children as they were brought to the ground. All of the tenants were either found trembling from the cold on the fire escape or near the rear windows.

Mrs. Vaugon, who has been bedridden, had to be carried from her room with only her night dress for protection, and when the alley was reached a policeman's coat was thrown around her and she was hustled to the Hamilton Hotel, across the street, with her husband accompanying her in only his pajamas.

Mrs. Vaugon was immediately put to bed at the hotel. It is not known to what extent her experience may have affected her.

The Forens, after reaching the ground, headed for the home of friends at 1306 I street northwest and walked through Franklin Park in their night clothes. Mrs. Foren carried her 2-year-old daughter, Margaret.

As they passed through the park, the parents stopped for a moment to look back and view the blazing building from which they had so narrowly escaped. Mrs. Foren mentioned the new radio and other furnishings that were dear to the family and seemed on the verge of tears when her young son, trembling from cold, sounded a philosophical note from his childish mind.

"Never mind," little Buddy said, as he snuggled closer to the man who was carrying him, "we'll buy some more things."

Crowds Witness Rescues.

Following the rescue of the Thompson family, they quickly disappeared, and police were unable to say where they had gone. It is believed, however, that they were given shelter in some nearby building.

Despite the early hour of the morning, the fire attracted a large gathering of spectators, and police reserves from the Third and Ninth Precincts were ordered to the scene to maintain fire lines. At one time water was being pumped from all fire plugs in the vicinity, and it was necessary to bridge the hose over the car tracks to permit the street cars to pass.

Although the fire had made great headway when discovered, and practically wrecked the building at 922 Fourteenth street, firemen succeeded in preventing it from spreading to any of the adjoining structures. No official estimate has yet been made as to the amount of the loss.

During the height of the Fourteenth street fire an alarm was turned in from Ohio avenue and Thirteenth street, where a blaze in Bethany Chapel was quickly extinguished with damage estimated at $5. The chapel fire, the origin of which is unknown, was confined to a window frame.

Caillaux, Third French Leader Sick at Home

Paris, Jan. 20 (A.P.).—Joseph Caillaux, former premier and minister of finance, underwent an operation today for the removal of bones broken in his nose in an automobile accident January 10.

Although his condition was said to be satisfactory, it was added that he needed a complete rest and medical attention for several days.

It is regarded as a coincidence here that Marshal Foch, former Premier Georges Clemenceau and M. Caillaux, three Frenchmen widely known during the World War period, should be confined to their rooms at the same time. Clemenceau is improving. Today he had his first automobile outing since his illness.

Woman Treated For Poisoning.

Mrs. Alice Whittmore, 45 years old, of 1237 Maryland avenue northeast, was given first aid treatment at Casualty Hospital yesterday afternoon for the effects of a poison, according to police of the Ninth Precinct. Her condition is not serious.

DEATHS OF 2, SHOT IN MOTOR, MYSTIFY

Slain Alabama Girl Is Said to Have Jilted Suitor for Man Killed.

WOUNDS POWDER-BURNED

Columbus, Ga., Jan. 20 (A.P.).—Detectives of Phenix City, Ala., and Columbus, Ga., today merged efforts to throw light on the deaths from bullet wounds of Miss Ella Mae Fountain, 20, of Columbus, and J. W. Edmunds, jr., 25-year-old son of a wealthy Phenix City property owner.

Investigators theorized that the couple either were shot by a jealous man or that it was a case of murder and suicide on the part of young Edmunds. When found not far from a roadside near the Georgia line in Alabama early Wednesday Miss Fountain was dead. Edmunds was seated, dazed and mortally wounded, beside her. He died Saturday night in a Columbus hospital, about 24 hours after the shooting was believed to have occurred in an automobile rented here by Miss Fountain Tuesday afternoon.

The fact that wounds were powder-burned led officers to lean toward the murder-suicide theory, but nurses said Edmunds made an almost incoherent statement just before death that he knew the man "who did it," but could not name him. Along this line detectives were seeking for questioning a man believed to have been a sweetheart or former husband of Miss Fountain, who is survived by a baby daughter.

Under questioning today Mrs. A. G. Fountain, mother of the slain woman, told police that her daughter had been friendly to Lee Brown, of Columbus, for several months and that she had broken an engagement to marry Edmunds last week.

Police today said Edmunds had been wounded twice, as had Miss Fountain, and that the revolver found nearby had four empty chambers. They said it would have been almost impossible for any one outside the car to have fired the fatal shots.

Fire Damage Is $2,000 As Empty House Burns

Fire of undetermined origin shortly before midnight last night caused damage estimated at $2,000 to the unoccupied house at 3701 Military road northwest, Chevy Chase. Fire Companies 20 and 17 answered the alarm which was sent in by adjoining residents.

The property, according to fire records, is owned by Commander George Bowdy, U. S. N., who is now in duty in California.

Youth Who Fled Fatal Crash Held

Prisoner Given to Arlington Police After Admitting Ride in Stolen Car.

Charles M. Whalley, 18 years old, of 429 M street northwest, was turned over to Virginia authorities last night by police of the Seventh Precinct for investigation in connection with the death Saturday night of two Washington youths in an automobile accident on the Wilson boulevard, in Clarendon, Va. He is being held in the Arlington County Jail. No charge has been placed against him.

Whalley last night admitted he was with Daniel Weston, 20 years old, of 407 Fourth street northwest, and Francis Hill Slaughter, 19, of 930 Sixteenth street northwest, both of whom were killed when the automobile in which they were riding swerved from the boulevard and crashed into a telegraph pole, demolishing the machine.

Whalley at first denied he was an occupant of the wrecked machine, which had been reported stolen Thursday night by Leo Greene, of 937 Twenty-second street northwest. He was taken to Virginia by William H. Thompson and Hugh Jones, of the Arlington County police force.

$300 Fraternity Pins Lost.

Breaking the show window in the jewelry store of Abraham Burnstein, at 927 G street northwest, thieves yesterday stole a tray of fraternity pins valued at $300, police of the First Precinct were informed.

OKLAHOMA CHARGES GO TO SENATE TODAY

Five Accusations Are Voted by House to Be Forwarded; Others Are Pending.

SPEEDY ACTION REQUIRED

Oklahoma City, Jan. 20 (A.P.).—Oklahoma tonight awaited the next chapter in the fight to remove Gov. Henry S. Johnston from office on impeachment charges. Writing of that chapter was expected with the reconvening tomorrow afternoon of the State Legislature after a week-end intermission.

Five impeachment charges, voted by the lower house of the general assembly late last week, were expected to be transmitted by a house committee tomorrow to the senate, which will sit as the impeachment court. Acceptance of the impeachment articles by the senate automatically would suspend the governor from office, senate leaders said. In that event, W. J. Holloway, lieutenant governor, would succeed to the chief executive's chair pending the impeachment trial of Gov. Johnston.

Five additional articles of impeachment, returned by the house investigating committee, which last week called many witnesses in its inquiry into official acts of Gov. Johnston, remained before the house for action.

In a signed statement issued last night Gov. Johnston answered charges of impeachment voted against him, declaring, "the governor is given authority by constitution or statute to do all I have done, and other governors have exercised similar powers without question."

The executive charged that "the purpose of these men has not been to investigate but to impeach."

Mexico Bars Immunity To Priests With Rebels

All insurgents have been guaranteed a safe conduct home if they surrender conditionally.

BOOTH'S INJUNCTION ALIENATING FRIENDS

7 TO FACE COURT TODAY

London, Jan. 20 (A.P.).—Writs have been served upon Chief of Staff Higgins and the seven commissioners who signed the requisition for summoning the high council of the Salvation Army, requiring them to attend high court here tomorrow for a hearing on the application of Gen. Bramwell Booth for an injunction against appointment of a successor to him in office.

The high council intends to ask for adjournment until Friday in order to give the seven members time to prepare an answer. If this is granted, it is clear that the work of the high council, which plans extensive changes in the government of the organization, will be greatly protracted.

A development of the week-end was the telegram sent to Mrs. Bramwell Booth at Southwold by one of the oldest divisional officers, Lieut. Cownam, of the Southampton area. He appealed to the Booth family to desist from legal proceedings on the ground that they are contrary to Scripture and to the army's own regulation, which positively prohibits settlement of disputes within the army by recourse to the civil courts. So far as is known the Booth family is ignoring this appeal.

It is known that the seeking of the injunction has alienated the sympathies of three of the four commissioners who previously had supported the cause of Gen. Booth. The council now stands virtually unanimous on the side of the reformist and against the Booth family. The reformers charge that Booth himself, as late as 1927, laid down the regulation forbidding Salvationists to go to law with other members of the army on pain of dismissal. They professed surprise and regret that the general himself should violate that regulation and that he should seek to test the legality of the deed of 1904 under which he accepted the generalship.

STEWART OIL CLASH EXTENDS TO EUROPE

Colonel and Rockefeller Seek Foreign Proxies That May Decide Dispute.

CHAIRMAN IS CONFIDENT

Chicago, Jan. 20 (United Press).—The battle between Col. Robert W. Stewart and John D. Rockefeller, jr., for control of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana assumed an international aspect today when it was reported that proxies would be sought among European stockholders to be voted at the annual meeting March 7.

The two oil leaders have been dueling for several weeks for proxies of the stockholders in the United States, with each side claiming victory. The foreign proxies may prove to be the balance of power to decide the fight.

Rockefeller brought the issue into the open some time ago, when he announced he would seek through proxy vote to oust Stewart from the chairmanship of the board of the Indiana Standard Co. Stewart met the challenge with the announcement that he would seek proxies among the stockholders also, and on his return here from New York today appeared confident he would be retained as chairman.

On his arrival here today, Stewart said he was well pleased with the result of his visit to New York City.

Although the bulk of Standard Oil of Indiana stock is held in this country, it is known that several large stockholders live in London and other European cities, and these votes will have an important bearing on the outcome of the meeting.

Neither Stewart nor his associates in Chicago, however, would discuss what plans had been made for obtaining the foreign proxies.

Woman, 58, Seriously Injured in Auto Crash

Mrs. Annette S. Patterson, 58 years old, of 824 G street northeast, was critically injured yesterday when the automobile in which she was riding with her husband and daughter, Morton C. and Phyliss L. Patterson, was in collision at Eighth and R streets northwest with an automobile truck.

Mrs. Patterson was taken to Emergency Hospital in a taxicab and treated for a fracture of the ankle and skull and scalp wounds. She later was removed to her home. The truck with which the Pattersons were in collision was operated by Charles Jackson, colored, of 314 Dixon court southwest, and is owned by the Garden Tea Shop, 3334 Fourteenth street northwest, according to the police.

Novelist, Who Slew Friend, Found Dead

Leonard Cline Apparently Was Heart-Attack Victim Five Days Ago.

New York, Jan. 20 (A.P.).—Leonard Cline, novelist and short story writer, was found dead late today in his West Side apartment. A medical examiner said he had died about five days ago of a heart attack.

Cline figured prominently in the news in 1927 when he pleaded guilty to involuntary manslaughter in connection with the killing of his friend, Wilfred P. Irwin, on May 16 of that year at the novelist's farm at Williamtic. The plea was accepted by the prosecutor, who said that additional evidence in his hands "led him to a greater understanding of the crime." Cline was sentenced to one year in the Tolland County Jail. While in jail he continued his literary work, translating "The Magic Lamp" from the Spanish.

Cline was 38 years old. Among his novels are "Godhead," "Listen Moon" and "Dark Chamber." The author's widow, Mrs. Katherine G. Cline, of Detroit, Mich., was notified.

Salem Prosecutor Would Try Panzram

Is Expected in Capital Soon to Ask for Prisoner on Murder Charge.

District Attorney William G. Clark, of Salem, Mass., is expected to come to Washington within a few weeks to confer with United States Attorney Leo A. Rover in an effort to have Carl Panzram, now serving a 25-year term in the Atlanta Penitentiary, brought back to Salem where he will endeavor to have him brought to trial for murder.

Panzram, a sailor and former convict was sentenced to serve 25 years in the penitentiary for burglary by Chief Justice Walter I. McCoy, of the District Supreme Court, November 13 last. He confessed to the killing of 12-year-old Henry P. McMahon in Salem nearly seven years ago and to similar crimes in Connecticut and Pennsylvania.

Negotiations to have Panzram returned to Massachusetts have been going on since he was sentenced. The Salem police located four persons who identified pictures of Panzram as a likeness of the man they saw accompanying the McMahon boy the day he was murdered.

HOOVER DEPARTS FOR MIAMI TODAY

Cabinet commitments are concerned it is doubtful if any one of his 200 or so callers save Secretary of the Treasury Mellon is definitely certain as to his lot after March 4, and in the case of the Treasury Secretary, it may be that much is being taken for granted.

The two weeks in Washington, however, have accomplished this much. They have relieved the apprehension that existed in hide-bound party circles as to what kind of a President Mr. Hoover would be, whether he would set out to sweep out the old line politicians and bring in his personal friends, or whether he would recognize the party organization as it has long existed with its bright spots and its coloring that is not so good.

The conclusion is that he does not intend to tear in and oust the regulars, even those who were opposed to his nomination before last June.

Mr. Hoover has a few more weeks to think about everything, however, a few weeks on an island that may be made the mecca of job-hunters in one minute, and an enclosed monastery the next.

In the meantime, he is to leave his very capable secretary, George Akerson, here to deal with matters that will undoubtedly come up, with him in Florida and the Congress in session in Washington.

GUATEMALA REBELS LOSING IN 2 CITIES

Two Others Reported to Have Started Negotiations for Surrender.

GUNS SHELL INSURGENTS

Guatemala City Jan. 20 (A.P.).—Government forces today reoccupied parts of two cities seized by the revolutionists and were severely bombarding the part of Mazatanango still held by the rebels.

Airplanes using bombs and machine guns in cooperation with the infantry yesterday were said to have demoralized the insurgents, many of whom were seen to fall. These combined forces recaptured much of Mazatanango, including the railway station, yesterday, and early this morning subjected the remainder of the city to a violent artillery attack.

In the City of Salama the rebels in the northern part handed over their arms after their leaders had fled before advance of loyal troops which reoccupied the section without resistance. The cities of Quezaltanango and Totonicapan are negotiating for the surrender of the rebel leader Marciano Casado, who released the forces under his command.

The government dominates the situation and the republic is rapidly returning to normal.

Tegucigalpa Honduras Jan. 20 (A.P.). Unconfirmed reports today said that five Guatemala departments in the western section were in revolt with Gen. Fernando Morales leading the revolution. The foreign office here had no details.

(Associated Press.)

Minister Recinos of Guatemala said last night that advices from his government reported the government forces had entirely occupied Mazatanago. He added that his government's information indicated the revolution would be suppressed in the next few days. The minister also denied the reports that five western departments of Guatemala were in revolt.

Dry Agent's Shot Wounds His Friend

Accidentally firing a .25-caliber automatic pistol that he was exhibiting to members of his family and friends at his home last night, Sebastian La Scola, 36 years old, of 1364 Taylor street northwest, a Federal prohibition agent attached to the Baltimore (Md.) bureau, suffered slight injuries when the bullet grazed three fingers of his left hand and lodged in the knee of his friend, a roomer, Joseph J. Verdi, 32 years old, who was standing nearby.

Both men were taken to Garfield Hospital for first-aid treatment. Verdi was later removed to Walter Reed Hospital. The condition of neither is serious, although physicians fear that Verdi's wound may result in his leg becoming permanently stiff.

At the time of the accident La Scola was surrounded by his wife and 12-year-old daughter, Verdi, and his brother, Stephen Verdi, and Mrs. Sadie A. Bullock, of 1407 Orren street northeast.

MOVE FOR DRY LAW FUNDS OPPOSED BY CLINTON HOWARD

nounced objection to the proposal of Senator Harris, Democrat, Georgia, that Congress appropriate an additional $25,000,000 for enforcement. Howard's remarks indicated the difference of opinions held by outstanding drys.

"What is more needed, and would be a thousand times more effective, is an appropriation of $100,000 to enforce prohibition in the National Capital," he declared.

"The Federal prohibition commissioner is quoted as saying that there are 3,000 big and little bootleggers in operation and immune from prosecution in Washington. That is a national scandal. What is the use of trying to dry up the whole country with any sum of money if the Government can not dry up the Capital, where it has supreme authority?

"Every dollar spent to enforce prohibition in New York or elsewhere is a misappropriation of funds until Congress cleans up its own nest.

"The superintendent of police of this city has only 38 men and not a dollar available for the enforcement of the prohibition act in a city of 600,000 population—a city adjoining wet Maryland and a terminus of a trunk line of booze tanks from Baltimore and Philadelphia.

"Imagine a situation, after nine years of constitutional prohibition, where the superintendent himself can't arrest a man seen in the act of violating the law and firing on the Constitution. Over 1,200 uniformed dummies patrolling the streets with 3,000 leaks and Congress 'sitting pretty' and talking about a scientific investigation and an increased appropriation."

Howard suggested passage of a District enforcement act "with teeth in it," a law under which the District Commissioners and superintendent of police would be responsible for strict enforcement and the 1,300 members of the police force made available for enforcement work.

The $100,000 appropriation should be made available to the superintendent, Howard said, and with it the power to "lock up" the man who buys contraband liquors as well as the man who sells.

Under such enforcement Washington could be made bone dry in 30 days, he asserted.

Adequate enforcement depends largely on the use of political patronage, he said, adding that President-elect Hoover should appoint to office only those men known to be in favor of the active enforcement of all laws.

Bishop James Cannon, jr., chairman of the Board of Temperance and Social Service of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, issued a statement yesterday elaborating upon the telegrams he sent recently to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, in which he objected to that official's attitude in opposing an additional $25,000,000 dry enforcement appropriation.

In his statement the bishop said he was in accord with Secretary Mellon's belief that a larger appropriation should be given the Department of Justice to expedite handling of prohibition law violators and with Senator Carter Glass' proposal to appropriate $250,000 for President-elect Hoover's proposed prohibition survey committee.

He added that he could not see how appropriations for the Justice Department and the proposed survey could minimize "the desirability and the importance of placing at the disposal of the Secretary of the Treasury the proposed additional sum of $25,000,000, to be applied as he may determine after careful consideration."

REPARATIONS BONDS MAY TOTAL BILLION

Sun, Says British Economist, Agreed Upon Here to Settle War Problem.

RATE ALONE IN DISPUTE

Paris, Jan. 20 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—That $1,000,000,000 worth of German reparations bonds, issued over a series of years, will prove sufficient to settle the knotty reparations bond problem, is the view of Frederic Jenny, financial economist.

This figure was discussed at Washington before Owen D. Young and J. P. Morgan accepted appointments to serve on the committee soon to attempt final settlement of the reparations problem, Jenny asserts, and their appointment was permitted by the American Government because it is considered that the world's investment market could absorb a billion dollars' worth of German bonds.

These bonds would be equivalent of the present-day value of the last 25 years of British, French and Italian war debt payments to the United States, as Jenny, and Washington did not permit the appointment of two American financiers until it knew what European debtors considered a fair discount rate.

Five or 6 per cent was discussed as a possible discount rate, according to Jenny, which would bring the total bond issue even less than $1,000,000,000. The fact that the American Government permitted American experts to sit on the committee is proof to Jenny that Washington is ready to accept a high discount rate, though perhaps not as high as 5 or 6 per cent. Washington, it is known, discussed 4¼ to 4½ per cent, which would raise the bond issue to slightly more than $1,000,000,000.

Jenny considers that the essential balancing of terminal war debt payments as against the terminal German annuities covered by loan has already taken place at Washington and only the question of a fraction of a per cent in the discount rate remains open.

During the early years of what will probably be the plan adopted for definitive settlement of the reparations problem it is taken for granted that Germany will continue to pay annuities, though lower ones than the present "standard" annuity of $600,000,000.

while I seemed turned to stone. Her father, with a cry of rage, fled from the room. Shortly after, Moti staggered and fell dying into my arms. The wicked Amento tried to poison me, but his daughter Moti, my beloved wife, saved my life at the sacrifice of her own."

King Solomon reigned in the tenth century B. C., succeeding his father, David. The Book of Kings names a daughter of the Egyptian Pharaoh as being one of his 700 wives. Her father is credited with the gift of territory to Solomon, although he was also said to have harbored some of his enemies. Solomon built a special palace for his Egyptian bride.

MAY RESIGN

DR. CLARENCE C. LITTLE.

HEAD OF MICHIGAN U. TO RESIGN, IS REPORT

Rumors Persist in Spite of Denial by Dr. Little and Regent's Aid.

MANY POLICIES OPPOSED

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 20 (A.P.).—The resignation of Dr. Clarence C. Little as president of the University of Michigan, it was reported in university circles today, may be presented at the regular monthly meeting of the board of regents tomorrow night.

Dr. Little declared he had not resigned, and Shirley W. Smith, secretary of the board of regents, said the board had not received the resignation.

The report persisted, however, that the resignation would be presented and accepted, with a disagreement between Dr. Little and the board over policies of administration as the reason. The resignation, it is reported, would take effect September 1, but a leave of absence dating from June 1 would terminate Dr. Little's presidency just four years after his appointment. He succeeded the late Dr. Marion Leroy Burton. Prior to his appointment as head at Michigan Dr. Little was president of the University of Maine. He introduced here new methods of selecting students and established what is known as "freshman week."

In cooperation with the alumni he worked out the details of the "alumni university" and was active in urging establishment of the recently organized university college.

Controversies that developed during Dr. Little's administration centered around addresses he made in his first year concerning birth control, the opposition of a section of the faculty to the university college and also plans, since abandoned, to have university experts make a tax survey of the State.

In denying that he had already resigned Dr. Little also denied a report that he had received an offer of another position.

DEFEAT OF CRUISER BILL HELD POSSIBLE

Senator Oddie Says That Foes Have Concentrated Effort to Kill Measure.

REPORTS ARE TO BE USED

ing from bad to worse. An even chance for the passage of the cruiser bill is now the best that can be forecast, according to the consensus.

This week may admittedly bring a change in the situation, but the cruiser bill has been buffeted about from pillar to post over such a period of time that it begins to loom as the most conspicuous ill-starred victim of legislative caprice that can be pointed to within the memory of the senator with the longest service.

Taking the present session as a sample, the unbroken sequence of calamities has been as follows:

First, the cruiser bill was to be passed in advance of the Kellogg antiwar treaty. It had the united support of Republicans and Democrats alike, it had already passed the House by an overwhelming majority and had been lying unacted upon in the Senate for many months since being filibustered to sleep last year because it always seemed destined to give way for something else.

It had the openly expressed approval of the administration, supported by an appeal by President Coolidge for action upon it. It was, in fact, an appeal coupled with a warning, for the President in his Armistice Day speech and in his message to Congress gave the country an insight into the National requirements which urgently called for action on the cruiser program.

On the eve of the session, several officials expressed concern over the possibility that debate incident to passage of the cruiser bill would affect subsequent debate on ratification of the treaty.

Delayed by Treaty Debate.

Then it began to leak out that an arrangement had been entered into whereby the treaty and the cruiser bill were to be debated simultaneously, part of each day being given over to one and part to the other.

The treaty became the unfinished business in executive session and the Navy bill the unfinished business in legislative session. This was called "a compromise" between Senators Borah and Hale.

But it turned out that this equal partition of time meant that the treaty was "first to be debated." The treaty got all the time and the Navy bill passed temporarily out of the picture.

By way of satisfaction for this "compromise," Senator Hale had assurances that as soon as the treaty was out of the way it would be clear sailing for the cruisers.

Senator Swanson started the fight for the Navy bill Monday, but the clear sailing program turned out to be a myth. The deficiency appropriation conference report came in and Senator Warren moved for its immediate consideration.

Meanwhile agreement had been made to dispose of the nomination of Secretary of the Interior West in executive session. The week was therefore consumed with the Navy bill again blotted out of the picture, although technically it is "the unfinished business."

Today will be consumed in disposing of the West nomination and tomorrow the Senate program indicates the beginning of a protracted fight over prohibition features included in the deficiency bill.

After a good portion of the week is devoted to prohibition, the question of tax refunds, contained in the deficiency bill, will come up for extended debate. Then cruiser bill will remain the "unfinished business."

Other Matters Coming Up.

After the deficiency bill is out of the way the agricultural appropriation bill will come up for consideration, and of course the plea will be made that the cruiser bill must not be allowed to interfere with this conference report.

Plans are already under way to make discussion of this conference report "very exhaustive" or lengthy if opportunity is ripe for further delaying the cruisers.

Anyway, the agricultural bill should be able to keep the cruiser bill pocketed until the War Department appropriation bill looms up as the next logical impediment to cruisers, according to the opponents of the Navy.

Then there is the independent officers' appropriation bill which will be brought up to displace the navy bill at the right moment, according to those senators who describe future proceedings with a smile and a twinkle.

There are so many, many important matters contained in these conference reports, they add. Usually conference reports are adopted in a little more than an hour and often with no debate at all. Now, it may take a week or more to carefully scrutinize each conference report.

Assuming that the cruiser bill gives way to each conference report until well along in February, the success of the filibuster against the cruisers is regarded as assured.

There is a real excuse for considerable debate over the question of whether the new cruisers should be built in Government navy yards or in private yards, and certain senators intent to "devote hours" to this discussion.

Professional pacifists and internationalists, armed in some cases with voluminous data from agents of foreign governments at Geneva, will keep senators supplied with enough last-minute propaganda to prolong debate to a sufficient extent to prevent an actual vote on the cruisers.

Pacifist ammunition for the big anti-Navy drive is being held in reserve until the situation develops to the point where defeat of the cruiser bill can be regarded by the pacifists as a virtual certainty.

LINER GARFIELD HITS SHOAL OFF FLORIDA

on a reef off the Bahamas today, has suffered two previous mishaps off the New England coast.

The most serious was her collision with the freighter Kershaw on June 1 last off Cape Cod, when seven of the Kershaw's crew was drowned. Conflicting signals were blamed for the crash, which occurred on a clear night.

Three years before the Garfield went aground on Half Moon Shoal, in Vineyard Sound, but was refloated without assistance.

The President Garfield left New York for a world cruise Thursday, and was due at Havana, its first port, tomorrow. It carried mails for Cuba, Panama and a couple of Central American ports.

The liner is of 10,558 tons burden. Its length is 502.1 feet, its width 62.2 feet and its depth 28.8 feet. It was built in 1921 by the New York Shipbuilding Corporation at Camden, N. J., and was turned over to the United States Shipping Board as the Blue Hen State. Later it was renamed. It is a steel twin-screw steamship. New York is its port of registry.

It was recalled that the President Adams, another Dollar Liner, and sister ship of the Garfield on the around-the-world service maintained by the line, ran on a coral reef outside the Atlantic entrance of the Panama Canal on January 10. The President Adams was next ahead of the President Garfield.

What the Elementary Schools of Washington Are Doing Educationally

A Series of Brief Articles Prepared Under the Direction of Superintendent Frank W. Ballou.

I. AIMS AND PURPOSES OF THE ELEMENTARY SCHOOL.

The typical elementary school in Washington is that unit of school life included in kindergarten and the first six grades. It should be thought of as a series of experiences which gradually increase in difficulty and are adapted to the increasing maturity of the child and to his ability assimilate and react profitably to them. These experiences have to do with the gaining of knowledge, skills, habits, attitudes and ideals. There is a body of such experiences in the elementary school which is the rightful heritage of all people regardless of sex, race, social position or vocational placement. These experiences are such as have proved vital not only to the needs, desires and interests of the child in his development but worthwhile and essential for adequate living in the world outside of school.

Of primary importance throughout all life is health. The elementary school, therefore, aims to have the child learn not only about the body and the physical conditions that make for health, but it aims to develop appreciation of the importance of health, and works to establish such health habits as contribute to maintaining the body in the best physical condition.

One can not learn from books, nor get the full enjoyment of life, nor can he become economically independent unless he can read, write and use arithmetic. The elementary school, therefore, places emphasis on the experiences of learning to read and write, learning to express oneself in good English in speaking and writing, and in learning to know and use arithmetic.

In order that the child may come to understand and interpret this wonderful world of nature, man's work in the world, and the human relationship of peoples as they live and work together in various countries, the elementary school provides the nature study, geography, history, civics, current events, &c.

How much of the joy of life comes from being able to appreciate beauty, beauty of color, line and sound; beauty of language! How interest in music, nature, art and literature makes possible a worthwhile enjoyment of leisure and provides wholesome expression for the emotions. The elementary school from the kindergarten throughout the entire six grades aims to develop in the child the love of beauty and interest in these finer things of life by providing in the educational experiences, music, art, literature and nature study.

Worthwhile experiences through which are satisfied the craving to do and to make things are provided in the household arts and industrial arts work of the elementary schools.

What knowledge is the child getting? What is he learning to do? Important questions these, but of greater concern than what will he know, and what can he do, is the question, "How will he act? What character is he developing?" The elementary school aims to have the pupils gain right attitudes and fine ideals. It aims to develop such habits as perseverance—applying oneself to a task by using initiative. It appreciates the necessity for eveloping habits of thrift, honesty, reliability, courage, self-control, and the much-needed virtues of openmindedness and tolerance. The children are trained, too, in habits of courtesy, unselfishness, cooperation; the development of sympathy, a sense of justice; arousing a desire to serve. Instilling love of country and training in obedience to laws; holding faith in mankind and developing reverence—all these are integral parts of the work of the elementary schools which we aim to achieve through the lessons, the plan of organization and the methods of teaching. This will become clearer as the other articles follow.

Through such rich, full living of each experience as it comes as a result of the seven years of elementary school life in the Washington Public Schools, we aim to have healthy, happy, efficient boys and girls with wholesome interests, fine attitudes, a sense of obligation to play their part in the world's work, with appreciation of the beautiful and the right, with well-rounded personalities and a grounding in character. To the degree that these aims are realized will they become worthy members of a home, effective participants in the world's work, desirable characters who will meet the responsibilities of life, personal and civic, with the best there is in them.

Women Foes of Dry Laws Sing Fervently for Cause

Evangelistic Methods of Groups That Fought Saloons Reported as Staid Matrons, Enemies of Prohibition, Gather to Plan Year's Campaign.

New York, Jan. 20 (U.P.).—As their sisters of ten and fifteen years ago defied ridicule and battled successfully against the corner saloon, groups of New York women are meeting, singing songs and putting pressure on legislators to down prohibition.

Except that their aims are opposite, the gatherings of the feminine foes of the dry cause bear a strange resemblance to meetings of the W. C. T. U. Contrary to a plausible supposition, the foes of the Volstead act are not flappers. They are serious matrons, a good many of them culled from the Social Register, and the spirit of the cause comes out chiefly, like that of the ladies on the other side, in the singing and an evident willingness to become martyrs, should any martyrs be required.

Mr. S. Edwin Buchanan entertained an important meeting of the Woman's Committee for the Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment at her home in Park avenue, which has folding doors between the drawing room and the music room, making an extraordinarily large parlor.

More than 50 members of the organization, whose roster boasts such names as Anna Katherine Greene, Mrs. Cadwalder Jones, Mrs. Alice Foote MacDougall and Mrs. L. K. Wilmerding, were present.

They found tracts assailing the Volstead act and the eighteenth amendment in their chairs when they sat down. One tract was entitled "Law Enforcement." Another was called "Wake Up, America." There were also the words and music to a song. It had a stirring march rhythm, as inspiring as the old favorite, "The Brewer's Big Hosses Can't Run Over Me," but it was called "Prohi-bition, No! No!"

This song started quietly and worked itself up. It went:

"When I first met you, Pro,
'Twas some time a-go,
You asked me to give you a chance, don't you know;
You rushed me through Congress, then through every State,
Your pet war-time baby I must legis-late."

CHORUS.

"P-r-o-h-i-b-i-t-i-o-n,
Prohibition, you're a fake, you have been a great mistake,
You are all wrong.
You never can pro-hib-it beer (rye, wine) from being made or sold,
You never can pro-hib-it freedom from the young and old,
You never can pro-hib-it and it is no use to try.
We want good beer (rye, wine!)."

But the women's committee did not get to the singing of this song immediately. It was the annual meeting, and at the direction of Miss M. Louise Gross, chairman, the secretary, Mrs. David Holmes Morton, not only read the minutes of the last meeting but reviewed the high spots of the organization for the entire year.

"One of the first things we did last year," said Mrs. Morton, "as you all know, was to change the name of our organization from 'Women's Committee for Modification of the Volstead Act' to 'Women's Committee for the Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.'"

Mrs. Morton also told of sending Miss Gross to both the major national political conventions with instructions to insert a wet plank, if at all possible, into both platforms. Miss Gross at the Republican convention joined forces with Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, and was defeated along with him. At the Democratic convention she went it alone, and was again defeated.

"But the vote in the fall was in no sense a referendum on prohibition," Mrs. Morton said. "Mr. Hoover said it was not an issue and thereafter refused to mention the subject. Mr. Smith had so many other issues that it was lost in the shuffle. We must now mark time until Mr. Hoover's committee reports."

Mrs. Maxwell Hall Elliott, president of Hunter College Alumnae, denounced the effect of prohibition, as she had observed it, on the younger generation. She was warmly applauded, as were other speakers, including Charles P. Spooner and George C. Andrews.

bullet wound he inflicted over his heart after shooting four times at McAuliffe from the parlor window of his home, took a turn for the worse yesterday, physicians said. He is said to have an even chance to recover.

A constant police guard is maintained at his bedside to prevent him from inflicting further harm upon himself or making an attempt to escape.

Hundreds of telephone calls inquiring about McAuliffe's condition kept operators at Georgetown Hospital busy yesterday. McAuliffe, well liked by members of the Police Department, had a host of friends in local sporting circles as a result of his interest in sports.

2,000 PACTS ON FILE IN LEAGUE'S OFFICES

Practically Every Treaty Concluded Since 1919 Open to the World.

U. S. PAPERS INCLUDED

Geneva, Jan. 20 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Whether or not secret treaties have been definitely abolished from the sphere of international politics is open to debate, but the influence played by the league covenant's article which pledges league members to register for publication every treaty they negotiate has resulted in more than 2,000 treaties being deposited at the league secretariat to date.

According to official figures, more than 300 treaties were registered with the league's treaty section in 1928, bringing the total well above 2,000 for the nine years of the league's existence.

Practically every treaty concluded in the world since 1919 is now recorded in the league archives and the contents are periodically published in the Treaty Series, which is open to everybody. Even the original treaties can be scrutinized by any one who shows a reasonable right to view them.

Not only are treaties negotiated between league members filed, but also all treaties between members of the league and nonmembers must be deposited. Consequently, every treaty the United States negotiates, except those with Mexico, Turkey, Russia, Egypt or the smaller nonleague powers, are revealed to the world through Geneva. But Washington has voluntarily offered to supply the league with copies of all treaties negotiated, so even these can no longer be classed as "secret documents."

During the past year there were 24 treaties of arbitration recorded. Twenty treaties dealt with economic matters and 59 with commerce and navigation. Others were on social, financial, juridical and general questions.

or Dallas, Tex., Shreveport, Montgomery, Ala., and Norfolk, Va. It was not planned to make any refuelings in the air.

The Question Mark's depleted crew consisted of Maj. Spatz, commander of the plane on its record flight of 150 hours 40 minutes and 16 seconds; Capt. Ira Eaker, pilot, and Sergt. Roy W. Hooe, mechanic. H. J. Adamson, War Department representative, was a passenger.

In the refueling plane were Lieut. Elwood Quesada, relief pilot of the Question Mark, and Lieut. Ross Hoyt. Lieut. A. H. Halverson, fifth man aboard the Question Mark on its long flight, remained on the Pacific Coast, having been transferred to March Field at Riverside.

San Angelo, Tex., Jan. 20 (U.P.).—Mrs. Y. Y. Eaker, of Eden, mother of Capt. Ira Eaker, chief pilot of the Army plane Question Mark, died today at the same hour her son was scheduled to take off from San Diego, Calif., in the record-breaking craft on a refueling flight to Washington.

Capt. Eaker left her bedside late Thursday and returned to San Diego in a pursuit plane to join the Question Mark crew. At that time she was reported as improving. Relatives had not been advised today whether the flight of the Question Mark would be delayed or whether the craft would land at Eden on account of Mrs. Eaker's death. The plane was scheduled to make an overnight stop Monday at Midland, Tex., which is not far from Eden.

Mrs. Eaker had been ill eighteen days with pneumonia.

THE WAY TO AVOID WAR.

The first lord of the British admiralty, W. C. Bridgeman, was the most outspoken of the British representatives at the Geneva conference in rejecting the American proposal to establish British-American naval equality of cruisers. It is also known that he had a hand in the making of the Anglo-French accord last summer. Some of the British spokesmen, notably Lord Cushendun, have been persistent in denying that the Anglo-French accord was aimed at preventing any agreement that would make the United States Navy equal in strength to the British navy. Now Mr. Bridgeman lets the cat out of the bag. In a speech last Wednesday evening he said:

> The Anglo-French proposals were a distinct advance in favor of the United States over what was proposed at Geneva in 1927. What we said in the Anglo-French proposals was: "If you really want these large 10,000-ton ships, to go these long distances, then so long as you do not arm them with guns of more than 6-inch caliber you can have as many as you like."

Great Britain has built many 10,000-ton cruisers, armed with 8-inch guns. But when the United States proposed that the two fleets be equalized in this respect Great Britain rejected the proposal. Then she made an accord with France, partly secret, whereby France agreed to stand by Britain in proposing that if the United States really wanted 10,000-ton cruisers, it could build them, so long as it did not arm them with guns of more than 6-inch caliber.

American cruisers with 6-inch guns would be easy prey for British cruisers carrying 8-inch guns.

Power to destroy American warships and American merchant vessels is what the British first lord of the admiralty advocates. When the stupidity of the Anglo-French accord was exposed much haste was made to disavow it. British as well as American observers expressed surprise that the authors should have been so simple as to expect the United States to accept the proposal to make the United States Navy forever inferior to the British.

A few British statesmen appreciate the fact that the British Empire will be in peril if it ever again presumes as a belligerent to capture or destroy the neutral ships of the United States. Americans are determined that their neutral commerce shall not be the prey of foreign belligerents. Since Britain, if hard pressed while at war, would again use her sea power for her own advantage whenever she dared, without regard to neutral rights, it follows that the only certain means of preventing war between Great Britain and the United States is to make the navies substantially equal in strength. Then they would leave each other alone, for the risk of aggression would be too great. Neither nation wants war. But the relations between them changes when one becomes a belligerent while the other remains neutral. Twice the two nations have clashed under such conditions, and on one occasion the collision resulted in war.

When a nation's life is at stake politeness in respecting richly-laden neutral ships is forgotten, and all such ships are captured unless the belligerent fears that such action would line up another enemy against him. The United States will surely go to war if its commerce is destroyed by foreign belligerents. This commerce will not be destroyed if the United States Navy is strong enough to punish an aggressor.

A VAGRANCY LAW.

Washington's vagrancy laws are obsolete and inadequate. Police officials have pointed this out on numerous occasions and the courts have backed them up. At the present time a new vagrancy law is pending in the House District committee in which are listed six classes of persons who can be regarded as vagrants, including all persons regarded as vagrants under common law. Maj. Hesse, however, has submitted to the Senate District committee a more comprehensive measure in which eight additional classes that could be regarded as vagrants are listed.

In addition, the Hesse bill contains a provision under which the burden of proof in vagrancy cases would rest on the defendant rather than the prosecution. In prosecutions for vagrancy it would not be up to the District to prove that a person does not have property sufficient for his support, but whenever it is established that the defendant has been wandering in idleness and is able to work, or that, being able to work, has been loitering about public places, a prima facie case of guilt shall be regarded as established.

It is fundamental in law that the burden of proof shall always be upon the person who makes an accusation. If the police desire to prosecute for vagrancy it should be up to them to prove their charge in each case. The presumption of innocence protects even a man in rags. The Hesse proposal strikes at a precedent older than the law itself. It is both dangerous and pernicious.

The District should have a new vagrancy law. It should be enacted forthwith so as to become an effective weapon for the police to bring into play against the lawless that will be attracted to Washington by the inauguration. The new law, however, should not be one that might do injustice to the innocent.

BEGIN AT THE OTHER END.

Senator Harris, of Georgia, would increase the prohibition enforcement fund by $25,000,000. This amount has not been requested by the Prohibition Bureau, and so far as is known no provision is made whereby it might be effectively expended. Secretary Mellon has stated that Senator Harris' proposition does not bear the indorsement of the Treasury Department, presumably because the Prohibition Bureau, as at present organized and administered, is not yet prepared to use that amount.

Senator Jones, of Washington, would appropriate $1,250,000 to be spent in disseminating information in favor of law enforcement and to increase the number of field workers in the Prohibition Bureau. Again it may be urged that the Treasury Department and the Prohibition Bureau are the best judges of their requirements.

This is probably the first time in history when it has been assumed that any department or bureau has not asked for all the appropriation necessary for its purposes. Enforcement of the prohibition law at present is a matter of experiment and evolution. There is nothing to indicate that the Prohibition Bureau is not acting in perfectly good faith and extending its activities wherever and whenever conditions warrant.

The printed report of estimates for the independent establishments shows that the Civil Service Commission is undermanned. It appears that at least 5,000 investigations into the personal life, habits, character and fitness of applicants for positions in the Prohibition Bureau will have to be made within the next twelve months. It was also stated by representatives of the Civil Service Commission before the subcommittee of the appropriations committee of the House that there is a growing tendency in the Customs Bureau and other Federal departments to insist on personal investigations, and that these require both time and money.

It would appear that if Congress is eager to make unasked-for and gratuitous appropriations to departments or bureaus which have not requested them through the budget it might see that the Civil Service Commission has ample funds with which to build up a large and effective corps of investigators who would, in turn, make searching inquiry into the qualifications of would-be law enforcement officers. That would be starting at the right place to improve enforcement of the prohibition laws.

HARVARD'S INNOVATION.

One of the most interesting experiments ever made in the field of higher education is being undertaken at Harvard University. In his recent annual report to the board of overseers, President Lowell outlined plans dividing the student body into residential groups for the purposes of study and social affiliation. The gift of several million dollars by E. H. Harkness, New York financier, will make possible the construction of several new houses, and the ultimate plan is that the whole college shall be divided into small units.

Each house will contain approximately 250 students selected so as to represent a cross section of the entire college in matters of finances, educational courses and geographical distribution. Instead of meeting students in lecture rooms, instructors will live in the houses and establish much more intimate relations with members of their classes. More favorable contacts will also be formed within the group, thus giving Harvard the social advantages of smaller institutions.

The experiment is particularly significant because of the tendency for students to concentrate in the larger colleges of the country. If they can have the benefit of direct instruction by such a faculty as Harvard's; if they can live in a homelike and cultured atmosphere, and at the same time form new and valuable friendships, there will be a further migration of students to large centers of learning.

The movement is clearly designed to vitalize education. In most of the large universities today students spend a few hours in classes, and may not learn much of the art of living. Under the Harvard plan they would live with cultured men and have the best possible opportunity to learn how to live. As President Lowell points out, the success of the plan will depend largely upon the selection of membership in the various groups.

This is by no means the first important innovation to be credited to Harvard. Last year reading periods of several weeks in length, during which students devoted their entire time to reading, were inaugurated with considerable success. The value of the present experiment can only be determined after trial, but there is no question as to the wisdom of a policy that seeks to bring about closer contact between instructors and students, and to provide an environment which in itself will improve and educate young men.

Don't be too good to the kids. It's a shame to deny any child the joy of martyrdom.

Sounds funny to hear a Republican say "you-all."

NAVAL DEFENSE

By ALFRED H. HAAG,
Director Department of International Shipping School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University.

Naval armament and its corollary, disarmament, is the outstanding question of the moment. Attention is now centered on the cruiser bill.

The issue is clouded and the water is muddied both here and abroad by contributions of so-called naval experts, press comment and editorials, organized propaganda, and all the subtle methods now employed to advance and promote foreign policies.

As regards the world in general, the question revolves around the recently signed peace pact; and as regards the United States, Great Britain, Japan, France and Italy, the question revolves around the purpose and the objective of the Washington Arms Conference. The purpose and objective of the conference as expressed by its chairman and assented to by all its members may be found in his concluding remarks. Mr. Hughes, chairman, then Secretary of State, said in part:

> May I say in conclusion that no more extraordinary or significant treaty has ever been made. It is extraordinary because we no longer merely talk of the desirability of diminishing the burdens of naval armaments but we actually limit them. * * * I shall not enlarge upon the significance of the engagement. Of course, it is obvious that it means an enormous saving of money and the lifting of a very heavy and unnecessary burden from the peoples of the countries that unite in this agreement. This treaty ends, absolutely ends, the race in competition in naval armaments. At the same time it leaves the relative security of the great naval powers unimpaired. The significance of the treaty is far more than that. In this treaty we are talking of arms in the language of peace. The best thing about the engagement is the spirit which has been manifested throughout our negotiations and to which is due our ability to reach this fortunate conclusion. In other words, we are taking perhaps the greatest forward step in history to establish the reign of peace.

Our naval policy, officially promulgated, and having in mind the Washington Arms Conference, reads in part as follows:

> The Washington treaty limiting naval armament is the supreme law of the powers party to the treaty governing their naval armaments as to capital ships, aircraft carriers and the size and armament of cruisers. The spirit of the treaty indicates two elements of international import: A general desire to avoid competition in naval armament and a partial recognition of a ratio in naval strengths as a means of avoiding competition. Should any power undertake a program of expansion in unrestricted classes of naval vessels or in personnel not consistent with the treaty ratios of capital ships, a new competition in naval strengths would thereby be initiated. Until such time as other powers by inequitable conduct in international relations as to United States interests or by their departure from the idea of a suspended competition in naval armaments, indicate other procedure, the Navy of the United States may be governed in naval strengths by the spirit of the capital ship ratios, otherwise it will be necessary appropriately to readjust our naval policy.

The United States accepted the conference in full faith. It actually scrapped nineteen vessels built and afloat and canceled the building program of thirteen others under construction, thereby unquestionably casting aside world naval supremacy, because in the vessels it scrapped were the most formidable combatant ships in the world.

The ships actually scrapped by the United States numbered 32 of over 842,000 tons. The ships scrapped by Great Britain numbered 19 of 398,000 tons. The ships scrapped by Japan numbered 16 of 355,000 tons.

By this program the United States scrapped twice the tonnage of any other participant, and agreed to abandon and did abandon a building program that meant first place in the world of naval affairs.

Nearly seven years have elapsed since the signing of the Washington treaty. What has been accomplished during this interval in the fulfillment of the objective and sentiments expressed? During the seven years that have elapsed what have been the naval building programs of the participants of the conference?

In capital ships and aircraft carriers and other combatant types of the first line and second line, the total tonnage of vessels laid down or appropriated for since February 6 1922, the record credits Japan with 127 of over 415,000 tons; the British with 78 of over 393,000 tons, and the United States with 19 of less than 157,000 tons. In addition, France has provided for 120 ships of nearly 291,000 tons, and Italy 83 of over 181,000 tons.

In tonnage of modern cruisers built, building or about to be built the United States has been outdistanced by both Great Britain and Japan. Instead of there being a 5-5-3 ratio, the ratio now stands 5 for Great Britain, 2.5 for Japan and 1.8 for the United States.

The record of today clearly demonstrates that the actual outcome of the Washington Arms Conference places the United States in a position of inferiority.

The present cruiser bill is for replacements and additions that common sense dictates we should have. The vessels called for, if built, will not alter our position in the world of naval affairs. When we get them, even if the other members of the conference do no more than complete their present programs, we will still be in a position of inferiority.

The contribution to world disarmament by the United States in faithfully carrying out its scrapping program was the greatest in human annals. As the chairman of the arms conference said in his remarks:

> In this treaty we are talking of arms in the language of peace * * * in other words we are taking perhaps the greatest forward step in history to establish the reign of peace.

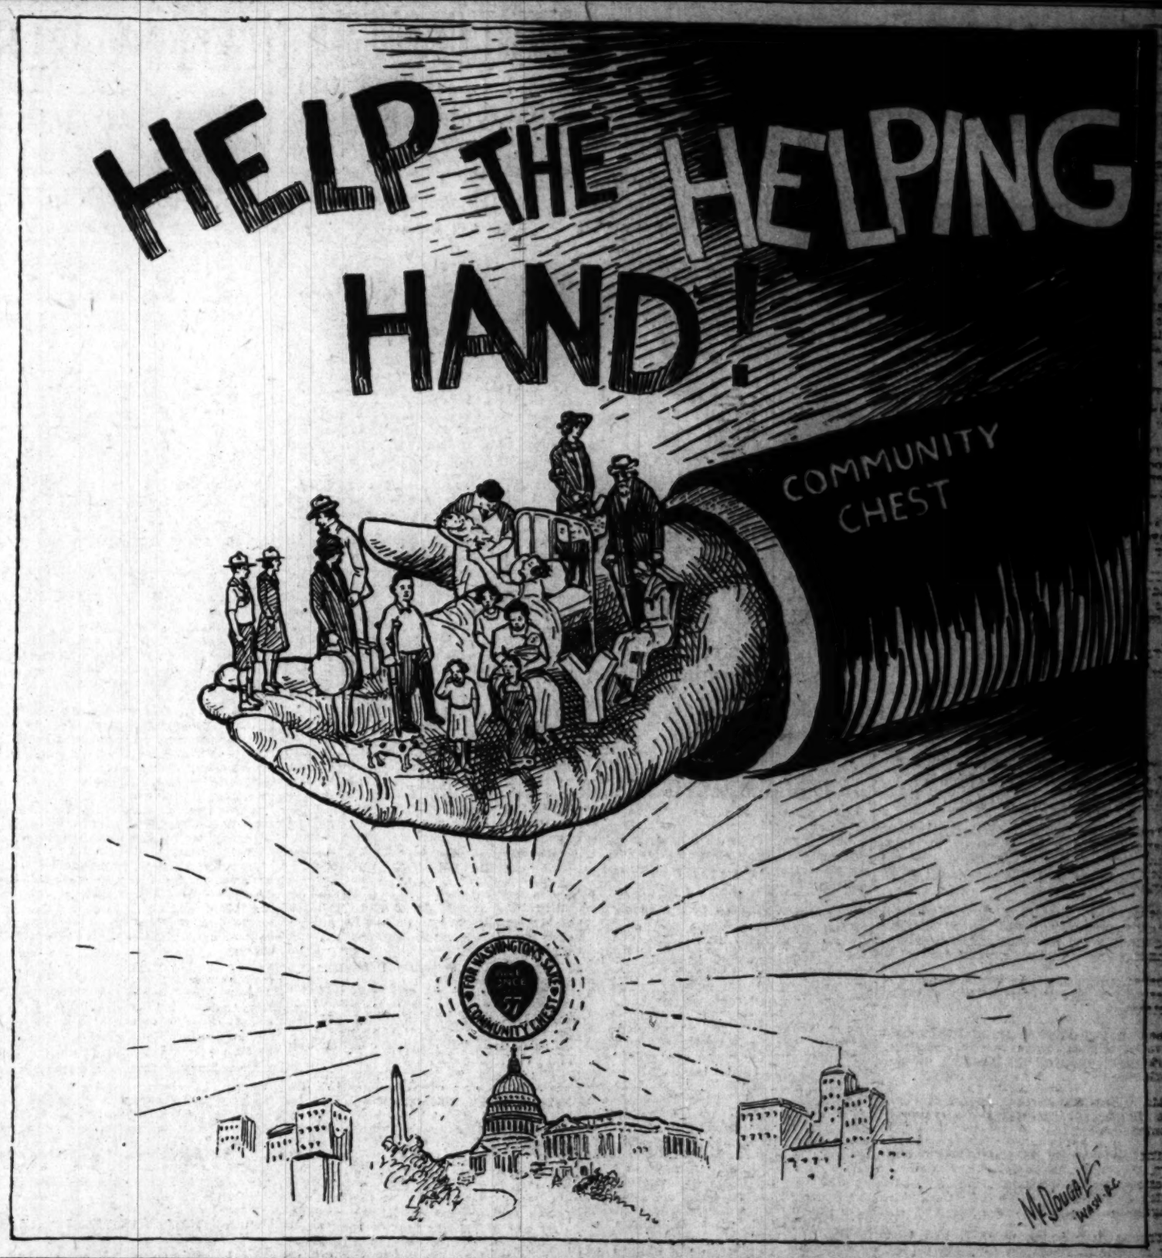
The United States took that step. What steps did the other participants take? The records disclose.

Until and unless the other maritime powers of the world talk "of arms in the language of peace" and translate the talk into deeds as the United States did, we must and we should build the vessels called for in the cruiser bill. We should continually keep before us the words of our President in his last message to the Congress, when he said:

> This building program is for necessary replacements and to meet our needs for defense.

We should also always have in mind the words of President-elect Hoover, when he said:

> In the armed world there is only one certain guarantee of freedom, and that is preparedness for defense. * * * We must and shall maintain our naval defense and our merchant marine in the strength and efficiency which will yield to us at all times the primary assurance of liberty—that is, of national safety.



PRESS COMMENT.

That's Something.

Detroit News: There are certain people who don't seem to have any special mission in life except to be news.

Poor Girl.

Cincinnati Enquirer: Nothing makes daughter more indignant than father's not being able to make money enough so mother can dress she does.

Not Yet.

Des Moines Register: Aviation has not yet reached the stage where a pilot has to stick out his hand when he is going to turn a corner.

Plenty Still Open.

Indianapolis News: They continue to raid night clubs in New York, but the situation hasn't yet become serious enough to affect the tourist trade.

The Next Step.

Detroit News: Cardboard milk containers are figured to eliminate much of the noise of milk deliveries. The matter of putting carpet slippers on the horse is, however, still in abeyance.

Sure.

Boston Transcript: Mr. Hoover has been quoted as saying that there was not room enough in Washington for two Presidents at the same time, but a President and a President-elect manage to get along together very comfortably.

Modern History.

Des Moines Register: A new history of civilization in Great Britain has just been published, with much more space devoted to the social and economic life of the people than to the military and the political.

That is, of course, the modern way history is written. We are not getting any books nowadays that give their pages to Napoleon and Caesar and leave out the industrial revolution and the rise of the feudal system, which we know now were far more important.

In this new British history the headings are industry, law, franchise, middle class, painting, not Marlborough and Wellington and Cornwallis. (Perhaps the British do not put Cornwallis in their histories any way.)

But this means history is just beginning. What do we know of the habits and customs of the early Britons, for instance? Historians have never paid any attention to those facts, and they have been forgotten or distorted by neglect.

We have to date history from, say, 50 years ago. Before that we were bewildered by the clash of pikestaffs, halberds and the sound of guns, too bewildered to know what was really going on.

When.

St. Louis Post Dispatch: When never an egg is scrambled at home and never a pancake fried; when pots and pans and the cook's brogans have left on the swinging tide; when the kitchen stove is a curio found in an antique store, when the kitchen itself has vanished quite, along with its savory lore; when never again on the stubborn glebe the sturdy farmer is seen, when the fields are sown and the clover mown by a corporate machine; when never a cigarette is lit by debutante or by sheik, when never a brow shall sweat for bread and never a back shall creak; when the frostless cocktail shaker is mute, with never an icy clink; when there's nothing to do beneath the blue but think and think and think; when the person who even mentions rum is put to the glittering sword, we shall then have arrived at the kingdom come of Philosopher Henry Ford.

Disturbing Possibility.

Houston Post Dispatch: The world is confronted with a disturbing possibility, and other things. Scientists tell us that chemists will soon make wood available for human food; and we already know that the artificial silk now being so widely (in some cases) worn is made from wood. What is to become of the wornout duds of the future? Are we to indulge in dinners of stuffed step-ins, broiled brassieres, scalloped skirts folowed by a dessert of hot hose, and will the emotional and tender-hearted woman strip off her lingerie when she comes in contact with a starving family? Seems to us science is going too far.

King Fashion.

Topeka Daily Capital: The Kansas columnists, and they are a strong outfit of wranglers and raggers, are perpetually slamming girls for their immodest dress, yet what young woman pays the slightest notice to their slurs? This is a mysterious thing about fashions. They supersede all other conventions, moral and otherwise. Not all the columnists in the world can persuade the girls that they are immodest, when they are merely complying with the laws of fashion of the time being. Yet the columnists keep everlastingly at it, like the Bourbons, learning nothing.

What Can It Mean?

St Louis Post Dispatch: It is much easier to understand why the Governor-elect of Missouri does not want his salary increased than it is to understand why the Governor of South Dakota refused to read his annual message to the legislature.

Mr. Caulfield makes the very good point that the constitution of Missouri forbids altering his salary one way or the other while he is in office. Gov. Bulow of South Dakota took a much more advanced position than that in refusing to read his message. He read only the first three paragraphs, and then said:

"It's going to take an hour and a half if I read this. I don't want to read it. You don't want to sit that long. The A. P. boys will send it out. Printed copies have been furnished members of the legislature and I want you to read it and abide by the recommendations."

A very sensible idea, indeed. But what a winter at the State capitals! One governor wants to be constitutional, another wants to be sensible. What are governors coming to?

Golf Lost Out as a Social Distinction Because Everybody Learned to Play.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

"THE church is losing its influence." How many times you see that statement in print and hear it repeated!! The fact seems obvious, and yet the exact opposite is true.

The influence of "religion" is more apparent today than ever before in the history of America. A tree is not judged by its size, but by its fruit.

People do not attend church as they did 50 years ago, and preachers do not rank as high in the community as they did then. But this does not indicate that the people have degenerated. It means precisely the opposite.

If the physician seems less important than he seemed yesterday, it is because the patient is getting well. If the teacher's knowledge of multiplication seems less remarkable than it seemed yesterday, it is because the class has learned to multiply.

That is the whole story of the decline of preachers.

The first essential to leadership is contrast between leader and follower.

The preacher of an earlier generation stood high in the community because he was one of the few who had a college diploma and wore a white collar.

The people in the pews no longer stand in awe of the pulpit, because they, too, have gone to school. Prosperity has given them culture. They no longer look up to the preacher for the simple reason that they are his equals.

But what of religion? Why has it lost its appeal?

The answer is similar. The land has become decent. The teachings of religion have been incorporated into our national life. The things people once did because they "had religion," they now do because it is the custom.

What of the "crime wave?" Crime is news because it is the exception.

Law violation? When laws multiply, violations multiply. Very few of the violations of law are violations of morality.

The common people—the ordinary folks who compose our great middle class—are respectable as a matter of course. They avoid evil as automatically as they brush their teeth—and for the same reason. They have learned the desirability of cleanliness.

Two generations ago, honesty was still a "policy." One generation ago the land still said: "Let the buyer beware." Now honesty is a common habit and is taken for granted.

The people have moved up. They no longer need reforming. They practice the virtues religion taught our fathers to practice. If they have lost interest in school, it is because they have graduated.

The preachers must be content to labor with the minority that still needs uplifting, or they must prepare a post-graduate course for those who have learned the fundamentals.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Shortest Poem.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In view of the fact that Representative Box has assailed the leadership of the Democratic party and that former Governor and former Presidential Candidate Cox, of Ohio, publicly resents and rebukes the assault, I have prepared and submit herewith what I claim to be the briefest, comprehensive and descriptive poem in the English language:

Box
Shocks

Cox

ALFRED B. WILLIAMS.

Soft Coal and Oil Fuel Nuisance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Isn't there any good agency that can look into, and do something about the soft coal and fuel oil furnace nuisance. When one sleeps on porches or with windows open, clouds of the refuse are distributed on our porch floors, beds, &c., and in rooms.

When sleeping on porches for our health we get up in the morning all smudged, with noses and lungs full of this refuse.

It is neither healthful, cleanly nor fair, that these nuisances are permitted to spoil the pleasures of our homes.

Every year we have to repaint because of the filthy conditions following the widespread use of fuel oil and soft coal. MRS. C. M. CLARK.

Trampling Down Grass.

To the Editor of The Post:—Sir: The cross-cutter, known as the jaywalker, is persistently defacing the beauty of our finest parks in Washington by trampling and killing the grass, thereby creating an eyesore to every lover of nature and to visitors.

Erecting sign boards, "Keep Off the Grass," low fences and wire entanglements have had no visible effect on the gay and festive cross-cutter. He takes a lively jump over them and completes his journey.

It is fortunate that there is a way to cure this growing evil and beat the cross-cutter at his own game. In 1883 as city forester in the City of Minneapolis I laid out several small parks with my system. About a year ago I visited the city and to my enjoyment walked through the park and could not find a single foot of grass trampled upon; and the people of that city are about as busy a lot as those of other cities. THEODORE G. THOMAS.

DIPLOMATIC SPORTS.

Sports and adventure have recently played an important role in international relations observes the New York Times. The excursions of Lacoste and Cochet to our tennis courts, Will Rogers' journey to Mexico, Helen Wills' appearance at Wimbledon, Lindbergh's flight to France have served as missions of good will from one friendly country to another.

A dispatch from London adds another item to the connection between athletics and the state, reporting that the foreign office forwarded a diplomatic note to the English Football Association, urging that only the best teams should take part in games on the continent. The British sporting public was astounded to find government interest straying so far afield. Waggish comment suggested that perhaps the foreign office had confused the football league with the League of Nations.

The explanation was simple. A British consul learned that an English football team was to visit the country where he was posted. As a sport enthusiast and a patriot, he at once suggested to the foreign office that a crack team be sent, as the local standards of play were high. This friendly tip was transmitted with the usual dignity and formality of diplomatic procedure.

British football fans no doubt calmed down when told the explanation of the foreign office action. They would chart the consul's desire to see a good team meet a good team. But it is easy to understand their indignation at the prospect of soccer becoming the football of diplomats.

Bulgarian Prince Arrives for Visit

Brother of King Boris to Inspect Motor Plants of United States.

New York, Jan. 20 (A.P.).—Traveling as "Mr. Cyril Sokolski," Prince Cyril, brother of King Boris of Bavaria, arrived on the liner Berlin today for his first visit to the United States.

The prince, not yet 30, was accompanied by Prof. Max Rabes, of the University of Erlangen in Bavaria. The professor said that the visit of the prince had no official significance and that his time would be devoted to a study of the country and its industries, particularly the automobile business, in which the prince is especially interested.

SMITH GOES SOUTH FOR VACATION TRIP

WILL FORGET POLITICS

Accompanying him were Mrs. Smith and Mr. and Mrs. William F. Kenny, close friends of the Smith family. They traveled in Mr. Kenny's private car attached to the Havana Special, which left the Pennsylvania station at 3:20 p. m. John J. Raskob, Democratic national chairman, was to join the party at Wilmington, Del.

The former governor said that he was "getting away from politics" and had no idea of seeing Southern political leaders while on his vacation. He and his party planned to pass six weeks at Srasota, Fla. En route they expected to stop two days at Savannah, Ga., to visit Carl Espy.

The observation platform of the private car was banked with flowers. Among the 400 persons who were at the station to bid farewell to the former Governor and members of his party were Mr. and Mrs. Alfred E. Smith, jr. Mr. and Mrs. Francis Quillihan, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Smith. It was said that the private car would be returned this week to take the rest of the Smith and Raskob families to Sarasota.

YOUR BOY AND YOUR GIRL

By ARTHUR DEAN, SC. D.
The Parent Counselor.

AN excellent suggestion has come from a reader regarding "The American Girl" competition: That a picture of the typical American girl illustrate the proposed beautifully printed card of a poem or a bit of prose descriptive of the true American Girl.

Every boy has a picture of girl friends. Now remove from the watch case, the secret drawer or the mantle her picture. Place it side of the tribute which follows and see if that "inner self which chisels the temple face" comes out in her picture.

The American Girl.

Honorable; trustworthy; loyal—to her God, her home, her friends; helpful; friend to all—the foe, the friendless; courteous, respectful of age; obedient—no matter how hard the task; cheerful; thrifty; womanly—whether athletic or quite; wholesome in thought, word and deed; and most of all, true to the inner self, which chisels the temple face."

Every mother has a photograph of a beloved daughter. Does her face fit this word picture?

Every girl possesses a photograph of herself. Why not compare it with the above contribution sent in by a youthful correspondent who says: "American Girls do not come from any one section of America. The aims and characteristics of My Girl are, or can be common throughout all section of the country."

I am going to illustrate my final selection—it's becoming a hard but nevertheless pleasant, task to select the best from the tremendous number of letters sent in—with a photograph of "My American Girl." She's "mine," you see, not simply "The" American Girl.

Now how is it to be done? Shall I have the artist draw one out of his imagination? Or will some mother send in a picture of her daughter? I know it's useless to S. O. S. the boys because the mantlepiece or the watch case will not look natural if she, even for a time, is removed.

Tomorrow—Reading Young Folks by Photographs.

OUR CONVERSATION CORNER.

Thirst for Knowledge.

I go to a private school and we are rebellious about homework. Our teachers are all lovely and we aren't worked terribly hard, but none of us like homework. This is our motto: "To work hard while we're in school, but to have recreation while we are out." What do you say? I will cut out the answer and show it to the teachers.

REVOLTING.

Answer—If every pupil worked hard while in school and every teacher gave up one-half the recitation period to show how to study, one-half to finding out what pupils already know and tied the two together, and then required a total of only one hour a day outside of school, we'd get somewhere with the purpose of education which is Thirst for Knowledge and Its Applications to Daily Living.

A Female Detective?

I want to be a detective. How and where can I get information concerning this business? GIRL.

Answer—Some police systems of the country have schools for young police cadets. I know of no public institution where people of your age are given a prepolice course. I have seen advertisements of private detective schools which sound most alluring, but I very much doubt that a 16-year-old girl, no matter how proficient she may be in theoretical detective work, will be able to secure employment. Suggest you turn your ambitions in other directions.

AUTO SHOW COLORS GLOWING THIS YEAR

Vivid Hues of Outdoors Will Add to Beauty of Auditorium; Opens Saturday.

150 MODELS ARE ON VIEW

Under the supervision of a corps of interior decorators a large number of workmen will today begin the task of transforming the Washington Auditorium into a background of color and light for the ninth annual automobile show, which will open Saturday evening under the auspices of the Washington Automotive Trade Association.

More than 150 different models, the product of 30 manufacturers, have been entered in the show, and there will also be displays of accessories.

"We are confident that the decorative scheme which has been selected for this year's show will lend a harmonious and distinguished and at the same time vivid air to the occasion," asserted Rudolph Jose, chairman of the show committee in charge. "The outdoors in all its flaming beauty will be the motif of the decorations. Greens and golden hues will predominate, forming a colorful background for the richly-finished motor cars to be shown.

"The show committee is sensible of the importance of providing a decorative scheme worthy of the notable cars to be displayed and has made plans accordingly.

"In arranging the various exhibits the committee is doing everything possible to make inspection of the cars by the show crowds convenient and instructive. This is of prime importance, since the attendance each year is growing. Last year more than 40,000 persons attended and this year's plans have been laid with a view to reducing congestion to a minimum."

The show will be officially opened at 7:30 o'clock next Saturday evening. Sunday it will be closed and on each day of the week ensuing it will be open from 1:30 to 10:30 p. m.

J. J. DOYLE, W. B. A. PRESIDENT, IS DEAD

WAS NOTED AS EXPERT

Stricken with a heart attack Saturday at midnight, James J. Doyle, president of the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad, died suddenly at his home in Wyman Park, Baltimore, yesterday morning.

Mr. Doyle was widely known not only in the electric railways field, but in other utility circles also. He was regarded as an expert in electric railway transportation.

Although Mr. Doyle made his home in Baltimore since joining the staff of of a railroad there in 1907, his friends numbered Cabinet officers, United States senators and many other national figures in politics, national business and finance.

Saturday night Mr. Doyle had planned to attend the annual dinner of the Alfalfa Club in Washington as a guest of Thomas G. Littlepage, who is a director and counselor for the W. B. & A. Mr. Doyle called Mr. Littlepage and told him that he was not feeling well and thought he could not attend the dinner. He remarked that his illness was not serious, but that he believed he had better stay at home. Shortly before midnight Saturday Mr. Doyle was seized with the heart attack and as he was rising from bed to get some medicine he fell unconscious to the floor and died a few moments later.

Mr. Doyle was born in Cleveland, 53 years ago. After attending the public schools there, he began his railroad experience with the Pennsylvania Railroad. After a number of years, he joined the Eastern Ohio Traction Co. as construction engineer in 1899, and assisted in building that electric railway.

Success in Baltimore.

His success and reputation gained with the Eastern Ohio company led to his coming to Baltimore. In 1907 the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad was beginning construction. The service of a construction expert was needed, so Mr. Doyle accepted the position. He assisted in building the W., B. & A. After the railroad had been built, he remained as superintendent of track and overhead, and in 1909 was made general superintendent.

Two years later Mr. Doyle was made vice president and general manager, succeeding John N. Shannahan, who is now president of the Omaha & Council Bluffs Electric Railway. Mr. Doyle remained in that position until June, 1927, shortly before the W., B. & A. was purchased by the Consolidated Gas & Electric Co. as a means of extending its electric utilities field outside of Baltimore.

Mr. Doyle was strictly a self-made man, Harry T. Connoll, vice president and general manager of the railroad, declared. "He was a keen observer, and his industry and insight into difficult problems made him one of the foremost experts in the transportation field."

Burial to Be in Cleveland.

During his service with the railroad Mr. Doyle was asked to make several surveys of physical properties of several Midwestern gas and electrical properties. His reports on these properties were regarded as authoritative and final.

Mr. Doyle also was active on a number of committees of the American Electric Railway Association. He was a member of the Maryland, Elkridge Hunt and Sherwood Clubs, among others.

His mother lived in Cleveland, where she died last Thanksgiving, while his father, James J. Doyle, sr., died there three years ago.

Mr. Doyle is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lillian H. Doyle, and five sisters, Mrs. Charles Greensalt, Mrs. Edward Glouth; Mrs. Grace Huston, Mrs. Charles Montcastle and Miss Helen Doyle, and by two brothers, Edward J. and Raymond Doyle, all of Cleveland.

Special services will be held in his home at 3 p. m. today. His body will be taken to Cleveland for burial there Thursday.

WARNINGS ISSUED TO HELP YOU PROTECT AGAINST INFLUENZA

Many have found it expensive in time and money to take a chance with what seemed "just a cold." With influenza sweeping the country, city health departments have published warnings that deserve the attention of sensible people. These warnings are directed against all unnecessary exposure to contagion and outline some simple methods of keeping resistance to disease at the highest point.

Regular hours, exercise in the open, plenty of water, good food, fresh air—all of these are stressed by officials. Keep the hands away from the face. Wash always before eating. If busses, trolleys, etc., must be frequented it is advisable to take the greatest precautions.

Vapex will keep you free from colds and it will stop a cold at the start. It is pleasant and refreshing to use. Put a drop on your folded handkerchief every morning. Frequently during the day inhale the vapor. It reaches the innermost passages and will keep the head clear at all times. One application lasts all day, even increases in strength for several hours. Get Vapex from your druggist for $1 in the little square bottle and the package with the green triangle. Each bottle contains 50 treatments.

Rescued From Hanging, He Tries to Die in Crash

Lonaconing, Md., Jan. 20.—Hilliary Broadwater, 27, coal miner, is in a critical condition at his home as the result of an attempt at suicide.

Broadwater made a noose of an automobile chain after fastening it to a rafter in the barn, but finding it was not long enough, extended it with another chain and then kicked a stool from under him.

When his wife, Ruby, found him, he was well-nigh strangled. She took him down and assisted him to the house. Later he revived somewhat and, according to members of the family, made a second attempt by trying to drive his automobile over a 15-foot embankment, but was prevented by his brother, Leonard Broadwater, 37. He later collapsed completely. Broadwater is said to have been desperate due to ill health.

CHEST DRIVE BACKED BY COLORED GROUPS

Spokesmen of Race Indorse Movement; Mass Meeting Scheduled Friday.

CLUB PROMISES TO HELP

Wholehearted indorsement of the Community Chest movement by colored Washingtonians has been expressed by leaders and spokesmen of the race, according to chest officials.

The board of governors of the Mu-So-Lit Club, meeting at 1327 R street northwest Saturday afternoon, voted to extend the cooperation of the club to the chest in its endeavors to secure the support of colored citizens. Yesterday it was announced that a colored mass meeting and workers' rally will be held Friday at Metropolitan A. M. E. Church at 8 o'clock.

This meeting is to be featured by addresses of Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University; Bishop E. D. W Jones, of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, and Neval H. Thomas, president of the Association for the Advancement of the Colored People. Dr. Kelly Miller, chairman of the committee on coordination of colored people in the Community Chest campaign, will preside.

"Colored Washingtonians are heart and soul with the Community Chest movement," Dr. Miller said, "because of the many colored people unfortunately placed in positions where they must accept benefits from one of the many agencies represented in this campaign, our people as a whole are well informed as to the necessity of making this campaign a success. The more fortunate of the colored people will be found doing their share, and perhaps a little more, for the chest. If the rest of Washington gives in proportion to its means on the same scale that the colored section will contribute, the success of the drive is assured.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO FLU

Coughs from Flu May Weaken Your System and Lead to Serious Trouble

You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion may help you avoid flu, but is not sold as a flu remedy. If you have fever, or think you may have the flu, see your doctor immediately. (adv.)

Bright Outlook Continues Unbroken; Buying of Textiles Is Active.

CREDIT PUZZLE UNSOLVED

New York, Jan. 20 (A.P.).—Business and trade made steady progress last week, with practically no developments to mar the bright outlook for the next few months. Metal industries, particularly steel, again led the advance. Wholesale trade made fair progress for this time of year. Owing to the severe weather in various sections, retail trade reports lacked uniformity.

While credit conditions remained far from normal, and an eventual readjustment was generally regarded as necessary, little concern was felt for the immediate future. One economist pointed out that we have witnessed a period of declining business in 1927 when interest rates were low, and rapid acceleration of business in 1928 when high interest rates in the past have eventually led to a serious recession in business.

The general view taken of the present situation has been that the momentum gathered by business late last year will keep it at a high level for several months to come and by the end of that time bankers hope that some adjustment of the credit situation will have been made, although there seems to be no definite views as to how this will be accomplished. The rates for commercial paper were unchanged last week, although there was a further hardening of bankers' acceptance rates. The American Acceptance Council reported, however, that this form of credit reached unprecedented volume in December, and predicted a serious falling off pending the movement to broaden the acceptance market instituted by the Federal Reserve Bank.

Steel operations expanded slightly during the week, mill operations reaching 88 per cent of capacity at Chicago, and sheet mills at Youngstown operating at capacity. While orders from the automobile trade slowed up a little, this caused no apprehension, as the automotive trade is rapidly getting into its unusually heavy production program for 1929. Orders for railway equipment and heavy construction were large. Republic Iron & Steel Co., the first of the larger producers to report earnings for 1928, showed marked improvement in earnings.

The textile industry, while regarding conditions as still unsatisfactory, held its gain. The textile markets generally held steady, although a few concessions to clear out styled goods were noted. There were more buyers in the market for spring needs and the outlook was regarded as fairly promising. Uncertainty over style trends tended to hold up buying somewhat.

Shoe manufacturers reported good orders following the style shows, although further reductions in hides caused some unsettlement in the leathe. industry. The lumber industry reported that orders are now exceeding production, and there was more activity in furniture. The jewelry industry, however, lagged.

There was considerable speculative buying of grains, wheat and corn reaching the highest prices in several months. The latter was helped by reports of drought in Argentine. Cotton markets were quieter. Rubber encountered considerable profit-taking after the previous week's sharp advances.

The week's insolvencies fell of somewhat from the high totals of the year-end, and made a better showing than in the like weeks of recent years. The movement of freight held substantially above the corresponding periods of last year.

Mr. Matthew C. Brush, President of the Corporation, has furnished the following information regarding the Corporation and the above issue of Debentures:

ORGANIZATION AND MANAGEMENT

"American International Corporation was incorporated November 23, 1915, under the laws of the State of New York, for the purpose of participating in enterprises, both foreign and domestic. The resources of the Corporation are now invested chiefly in large and favorably known domestic companies engaged in a wide range of activities. It has important interests in the international engineering and construction business of Ulen & Company and in the International Acceptance Bank, in the organization of which companies it took an active part.

The Board of Directors of the Corporation includes Frank Altschul, of Lazard Frères; H. A. Arthur, Vice-President; Matthew C. Brush, President; Robert K. Cassatt, of Cassatt & Co.; Pierre S. DuPont, Chairman, E. I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co.; Halstead G. Freeman, President, Chase Securities Corporation; Arthur Lehman, of Lehman Brothers; John J. Raskob; Percy A. Rockefeller; Frederic W. Scott and Buford Scott, of Scott & Stringfellow, Richmond, Va.; George H. Walker, President, W. A. Harriman & Co., Inc.; Albert H. Wiggin, Chairman, The Chase National Bank of the City of New York; and Beekman Winthrop, of Robert Winthrop & Co.

ASSETS

The estimated liquidating value of the net assets of the Corporation, without provision for income taxes, if any, on unrealized appreciation of securities, amounted to $41,700,000 on December 31, 1928, securities having a current market being valued at the last sale prices on that day. This estimated liquidating value, equivalent to over $42.50 per share of the 980,000 shares of Common Stock now outstanding, with the addition of the proceeds of the sale of the Debentures is in excess of $2,675 per $1,000 principal amount of Debentures.

At the closing prices on the New York Stock Exchange on January 17, 1929, the outstanding Common Stock of the Corporation had an aggregate market value of over $72,000,000.

COMMON STOCK

In accordance with action taken by the Stockholders of the Corporation on January 17, 1929, the previously outstanding shares of Common Stock were changed at the rate of one for two into 980,000 shares of Common Stock of no par value. During the calendar year 1928, apart from a conservative revaluation of certain assets (amounting to an increase of approximately $1,500,000) and after payment of cash dividends equivalent to $1.00 per share on the Common Stock now outstanding, but without provision for income taxes, if any, on unrealized appreciation of securities, there was an increase in the estimated liquidating value of the net assets of the Corporation amounting to $10,470,000 or $10.68 for each such share now outstanding.

PROVISIONS OF THE DEBENTURES

The Twenty-Year 5½% Convertible Gold Debentures will be issued under an indenture with The Chase National Bank of the City of New York as Trustee, which will provide, among other things, that so long as any of the Debentures are outstanding the Corporation will not (1) create any additional funded debt or make any distribution upon or acquire or purchase or redeem any of its stock of any class if immediately thereafter its assets, after deducting all liabilities other than funded debt, amount to less than 200% of all of its funded debt, or (2) mortgage or pledge any of its assets except for current loans maturing not more than one year from the date of creation thereof made in the normal course of business; all as will be more particularly set forth in the indenture.

CONVERSION PRIVILEGE

The Debentures will be convertible at their principal amount into shares of Common Stock at $80 per share on or before December 31, 1930, at $90 per share thereafter and on or before December 31, 1932, and at $100 per share thereafter and on or before December 31, 1934. Accrued interest will be paid in cash. Conversion will be made at the principal office of the Trustee. If Debentures are called for redemption the conversion privilege thereof will continue up to and including the tenth day prior to the date designated for redemption. Scrip as described in the indenture, exchangeable in proper multiples for full shares, will be issued in lieu of fractional shares.

The indenture will contain provisions to protect the value of the conversion privilege, but stock dividends in the aggregate of six shares of Common Stock on each one hundred shares of Common Stock may be paid in any calendar year without affecting the conversion price."

Application will be made to list the Debentures on the New York Stock Exchange.

Price 105 and Accrued Interest to Yield 5.10%

Concord Wins, Tie for Lead In League

Defeats Marlboro, 4-1, to Match British in Standings.

Rockville and Arcadian Teams Set Stage for Title Contest.

By RICHARD S. TENNYSON.

THE hectic races in the two local soccer leagues became even more taut after yesterday's battles, which resulted in Concord tying British United for the lead in the Washington Soccer League and Rockville and Arcadians, leaders in the Capital City League, retaining their respective positions with victories.

Concord jumped to equality with the league leaders by defeating Marlboro in an interesting match, 4 to 1, and the Arcadians kept in striking distance of the Capital City leaders by defeating Silver Spring by the same count. Rockville received a gift of 2 points when Marlboro Juniors failed to place a team on the field for their scheduled game. Fort Myer tightened its hold on third place with a 6-to-1 victory over Gaithersburg.

Washington soccer fans are assured of only championship soccer for the next five weeks due to the outcome of yesterday's games. Next Sunday, the Washington and Southeastern District's cup tie games will be resumed and, following these, decisive contests in the Capital City and Washington Soccer Leagues will be played.

Concord Victory Harder Fought Than Score Indicates.

Clan MacLennan, the general favorite to capture the Washington Soccer League honors, will meet Concord in the final contest of this circuit, while Rockville and the Arcadians appear in the final Capital City League game. All of which brings about the most interesting soccer situation ever developed in the District since the game was put on an organized basis.

Concord did not have a walk-away with Marlboro despite the 4-to-1 score. The Maryland kickers battled the German Club with only ten men and fought every inch of the way. A fair slant on the comparison of the two clubs may be obtained by observation of the conditions under which the goals were scored.

In the first half Concord scored three goals to none chalked up by Marlboro. At this time, the Concordians were kicking with a strong wind. In the second period Marlboro had its back to the wind and scored one goal, as did Concord.

Silver Spring Kickers Put Up Fight Against Arcadians.

Beyerlin and Emil Konnel were offensive stars for the victors, while Horning displayed some fancy defense tactics in the face of the strong wind in the second stanza. The Wyville brothers were outstanding players on the Marlboro Club, although Buck displayed unusual ability as a goalkeeper, particularly in the first half, when Concord was waging a constant attack on the Maryland goal.

The Arcadian soccerites did not have the cinch they expected with Silver Spring kickers. The Fourteenth street boys were fortunate to have a 1-to-0 lead at the end of the first 45 minutes of play, this due to a penalty kick, and were contested for every advantage in the second half.

Tom Clark, Arcadians' rangy center, was a tower of strength in the victors' line-up, while Dyer, the vanquished team's goalie, played a creditable game. Wolf played an aggressive, fast game for the Arcadia crowd.

Fort Myer once more uncovered that mysterious offensive power that it has shown occasionally this season. The soldiers have been hopeless in half of their games and in the other half have displayed scoring ability equal to any combination in the District. Gaithersburg was no match for the terrific attack waged by the Fort Myer forwards.

An important meeting of the District Soccer Referees Association will

South Atlantic Tourney Expected to Set Records For District Basket Ball

WIDESPREAD and instantaneous response greeted the announcement yesterday that The Washington Post again would sponsor the South Atlantic basket ball tournament in Washington in cooperation with A. A. U. officials for the third successive year. The Post sports department last night was besieged with applicants for entry by teams in every weight division, reflecting the intense interest that the event has commanded for the last two seasons. The date of the start of the tournament this year has been fixed for March 11.

Early indications point to the greatest entry list in the history of the tournament, exceeding even the 71 Washington teams that competed in the event last year under The Post's auspices. Washington outstripped every locality in the Nation in point of entries, bettering even the number of teams competing in Baltimore, which has been the scene of South Atlantic tournaments for more than a decade.

The Post's effort to popularize basket ball here has been received with unexpected success. It was first the aim of this newspaper to provide Washington with a part in the tournament to relieve Washington teams of the necessity of making several trips to Baltimore to compete in the tournament, but the event here was greeted with such popular favor that Baltimore officials of the A. A. U. last year decided to play all final games for the championship in the Capital.

At least half of the final games will be played here this season.

Tournament Provides Recognition For District Champions.

The tournament serves a twofold purpose in that it provides official recognition for teams winning the Washington titles as well as the South Atlantic titles. It is conceded that any team surviving the bulky and strong field that competes in the tournament is entitled to championship recognition.

Fly-by-night teams are barred from the tournament, eliminating the possibility of all-star teams composed of players from several organizations forming for the express purpose and competing in the tournament. Only bona fide clubs of amateur players will be allowed to compete. These teams must exhibit scores of games published in The Washington Post before February 15 as proof of their organization.

The tournament will be conducted upon a high plane of eligibility. Championships will be decided in five weight classes, as follows: 100-pound class, 115-pound class, 130-pound class, 145-pound class and unlimited class. All players of each team must weigh in under official supervision under the weight limit of the class which their teams are entered.

This year The Post has revived the custom of providing a class in the tournament for girls who will compete in the unlimited division. The girls' competition was abandoned last season owing to the indifference shown by the teams in tournament play, but sufficient girls' organizations of the Capital have evidenced enough interest this season to permit of a girls' division in the tournament.

Games to Be Played Under Most Ideal Conditions Available.

The tournament will be conducted under the most ideal conditions available in the city. The games will be played on regulation courts either at the Boys Club or at the George Washington University Gymnasium, both popular centers of the court games. Approved officials of the Washington board, Tom Ford, Orrel Mitchel and Joseph Mitchell, will referee the boys' game, two officials to the game, and competent girls' officials will be provided to handle the games in this class.

All teams of Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia are eligible to compete in the tournament here. Last year's contests saw many representatives from Alexandria, Hyattsville, Takoma Park and many military and Navy posts, including the Quantico Marines and Fort Humphreys. Scholatsic teams also are eligible. Both Business and Central High Schools competed in the 1928 tournament.

Owing to the fact that entry blanks for the tournament will not be available until later in the week. The Post is not yet able to accept entries, but an announcement within a few days will set the date for the opening of entries. Both entry blanks and A. A. U. registration blanks may be obtained at The Post sports department any afternoon or evening after the date is fixed.

College Fives List 4 Games This Week

Midyear Examinations Curtail Athletic Activities.

G. U. Opens Program Against Hopkins Tomorrow.

PLENTY of activity faces all of the District college basketers this week, but the boys will exert themselves mentally, in the main, and only four contests of a physical nature are at hand to attract their followers.

A classroom battle for eligibility will keep most of the collegians too busy for sport, as the annual midyear examinations have arrived. Georgetown, American and Maryland will keep in action on the court, the former having two games scheduled and each of the others being due to appear once.

Georgetown will engage Johns Hopkins on tomorrow night and Mount St. Marys on Thursday night, both clashes carded on the American University floor. Maryland and American will trot the boards on their home courts Saturday night, the Terrapins entertaining St. John's, of Annapolis, and the Eagles playing host to Baltimore U.

It appears from here that the program will make up in stirring competition what it lacks in fullness, for a closely contested argument for the decision is foreseen in every one of the four attractions.

Hopkins Promises G. U. A Real Battle.

Little doubt exists as to the power of all o fthe visiting quintets and the local coaches and layers admit they are confronted with real difficulties.

Johns Hopkins is rated capable of giving Georgetown a warm session, as is Mount St. Mary's, which annually produces a strong floor combination. The St. John's five figures to push Maryland all the way if not to win the verdict, while the ability of the invading Baltimoreans who will tackle American already is well known by local fans.

The outcome of the Hopkins-Georgetown clash will afford a basis for a comparison of Georgetown and Maryland, both of which started the season with a wealth of veteran material but which do not schedule each other in basket ball nor in any sport. Hopkins defeated Maryland last week at College Park by 10 points.

The Blue Jays, from the Monumental City, do not enjoy an especially fine early season record, but they pack plenty of strength, as shown when they stepped out in the second half against Maryland to win under wraps.

St. John's Team Should Give Maryland Trouble.

In Debuskey, center, and Jung and Pasarew, forwards, the Blue Jays possess a trio of basket marksmen who sport enviable records for consistently good shooting. They have borne the burden of Hopkins' attack in all games thus far.

Should Coach Ripley nominate Don Dutton to continue at the center post for Georgetown, the customers will likely witness a fancy exhibition of center playing with Dutton opposed to Debuskey.

A comparison of Georgetown and American may be drawn upon the result of the American-Baltimore U. contest. Georgetown trimmed the Orioles by 12 point in the former's first game of the campaign. If the American Five can win over Baltimore as decisively, a postseason battle between Georgetown and American, which officials are now contemplating, will take on great interest.

Maryland will meet one of the most powerful teams, offensively, in this region in tackling St. John's. Big scores seem to have been the order with the Johnnies in earlier games and Gallaudet bowed to them last Saturday night, 41 to 25. Bob MacCartee, Washington boy, is the leading scorer for the Annapolis machine, his average being something like 14 points per game.

Fate of Miami Bout Hinges On Result

Rickard Made Match, Believing Bostonian Would Win.

By FRANK GETTY
(United Press Sports Editor).

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 (U.P.).—In the ham-like hand of a rather bald rubber puddler of Akron, Ohio, lies the fate of a $500,000 venture at Miami Beach, Fla.

The connection between the Ohio city where they bake tubes and the Florida resort where they plan to hold a heavyweight elimination bout between Jack Sharkey and Young Stribling is that K. O. Christner, who, for the nonce, is Akron's best known citizen, is to meet Sharkey in a ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden Friday night.

If K. O. Christner were just an ordinary second rater there would be little public curiosity as to the outcome of his engagement with the big Lithuanian, but this Christner person is no ordinary second rater—he is a most unusual one.

The Akron heavyweight is the man who hit Knute Hansen so hard on the chin out in Ohio recently that the blow was felt all the way to New York, where it flattened the pocketbooks and put to sleep the interest of several financiers who had just decided to back the Dane as a likely candidate for the heavyweight championship.

Christner Demonstrated Knockout Punch in Hansen Match.

Item one, therefore—Christner has a knockout punch, which he has landed upon a heavyweight who is virtually Sharkey's equal as a boxer.

A knockout blow of that sort upon the Lithuanian's chin would be heard throughout Florida. A recumbent Sharkey would be no use whatever as a principal in the proposed affair at Miami Beach. As a possible substitute, K. O. Christner would lack the Boston heavyweight's drawing power.

Item two: Can K. O. swat Sharkey, and are the promoters of the match with Young Stribling risking their entire venture upon the outcome of Friday night's bout?

There seems no reason to doubt it. The New York boxing commission rules strictly against requiring a boxer to come into the ring with one hand tied behind him. When Christner's seconds ease his huge bulk up off the stool in answer to the opening bell and shove him toward Sharkey, all wraps will be off.

Up to Sharkey to At Least Outpoint the Akron Boxer.

Presumably it will be up to the Boston heavyweight to keep his mouth shut and his eyes open and at least outpoint the lumbering, unskilled, 26-year-old rubber puddler who has blundered into the middle of the fistic scene by virtue of the power in one hairy right hand.

Item three: Would the late Tex Rickard have countenanced the risk Sharkey, the promoters and the anxious little Florida resort will run next Friday night? The answer is that Rickard arranged the Sharkey-Christner match and was confident that the Lithuanian would come through with credit and not "faw down and go boom," carrying the biggest fistic project of the winter along with him.

Dempsey Takes Day Off to Go Swimming

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 20 (A.P.).—Sunday is Sunday, as far as Jack Dempsey is concerned, and he took opportunity today to relax with other Madison Square Garden officials from the job of preparing for the Sharkey-Stribling fight.

The former heavyweight champion, who took up the reins of promotion for the fight after the death of Tex Rickard, spent today in and about the water. For some time this afternoon he watched an exhibition of aquatics.

"I didn't even check up on the seat sales and reservations today," he said, "but I'll have to wade in tomorrow to make up for the time off I took today."

Junior Coen to Invade Europe This Spring

Kansas City, Jan. 20 (A.P.).—Warren F. (Junior) Coen, youthful Kansas City tennis star, will participate in mid-winter tournaments on the French Riveria and at Wimbledon, England, this year, it was announced today.

He will sail from New York February 4, with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Warren F. Coen and a brother, Gilbert. He will not try out for the Davis cup team of which he was a member last year. The youthful athlete believes his European trip will provide needed experience.

Coen is a student at the University of Kansas.

Ken Strong Will Join N. Y. Yankees in June

West Haven, Conn., Jan. 20 (United Press).—Ken Strong, New York University's All-American half back, announced at his home here today that he will join the New York Yankees upon his graduation in June.

The famous football star has played baseball for two seasons at New York U. and is regarded as a heavy-hitting outfielder in college circles. He will play in the outfield for the Violet Nine this spring and then report to the Yankees.

Strong was here over the week-end to attend a celebration by West Haven townsfolk in his honor. He was a unanimous choice for one of the back field positions on the All-American Team of 1928.

Grand Prize de Nice Won By La Fleur by 2 Lengths

Nice, France, Jan. 20 (A.P.).—Arthur Veil-Pickard's stanch 5-year-old jumper, La Fleur, is making a collection of the Riviera's racing prizes while his aged owner lies ill in bed. La Fleur won the Grand Prix de Nice today after capturing the Grand Prix de Monte Carlo last Sunday. Today's race was over a 3¾-mile course and was worth $20,000 to the winner. La Fleur beat seven rivals in easy fashion, leading his stablemate, Saint Bernard, by two lengths at the finish. Colombo, owned by Rene Guillet was third. La Fleur was at 7 to 5 in the betting.

The racing was witnessed by a huge crowd, swelled by the addition of Americans from the steamer Vulcania, which was laying in Monte Carlo Bay over Sunday before proceeding to Egypt for its next stop on a world cruise.

Washington U. President To Settle Coach Dispute

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 20 (A.P.).—A deadlock which can be settled only by Dr. M. Lyle Spencer, president of the University of Washington, made doubtful the status of Enoch Bagshaw, whom the student body's governing board has virtually dismissed.

Although the board of control insists that this action is final, the faculty athletic committee, which heretofore has passed on all matters affecting coaches, said Bagshaw is head football coach and will remain in that position until the expiration of his contract three years hence.

The committee last night attempted to affect a compromise, to which Bagshaw agreed, under which an assistant back-field coach would be selected by the board and added to the staff.

The board refused to compromise, appointed a committee to confer with Dr. Spencer, another committee to draw up a resolution setting forth its grievances against the coach and named Smith Troy, president of the student body, to confer with a lawyer as to its next legal step.

Asheville Pitcher Gets Trial With Hollywood

Los Angeles, Jan. 20 (A.P.).—Purchase of Joe Marty, 190-pound right-handed pitcher from the Asheville club of the South Atlantic Association, has been announced by officials of the Hollywood Pacific Coast League club.

Marty, 23 years of age, two years ago was taken to the New York Yankees' spring training camp, but was found to be a bit "green" for the big show.

Courtney Will Fight Tiger Payne Tonight

New York, Jan. 20.—George Courtney, the so-called Oklahoma cowboy, who has held down the position of challenger No. 1 for the world's middleweight title for some time, swings into action against Tiger Payne, the restless colored chap from Australia, in the main bout of ten rounds at the St. Nicholas Rink tomorrow night.

While Courtney probably will be a 2 to 1 favorite entering the ring, Leo P. Flynn, the Tigah's manager will tell you without a moment's hesitation that the odds are goofy. Flynn thinks Georgie is tailor-made for his black boy. In any event, it should be a fight worth while.

Oimen Sets Two Marks In Ski Meet at Gary

Gary, Ind., Jan. 20 (A.P.).—Casper Oimen, of the Norge Ski Club, Chicago, won top honors with two graceful record-breaking leaps at the Ogden Dunes Club ski meet before 18,000 spectators today.

Oimen won first place in the class A contest with a jump of 166 feet, which beat the old meet mark by 38. feet.

Guttorm Paulsen, also of the Norge Ski Club, won first place in the class B competition with a 162-foot jump.

$60,000 PRIZE FOR BUNION DERBY

Pyle to Train Runners for 1929 Coast-to-Coast Jaunt.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 (United Press). C. C. Pyle, who hopes to recoup last year's losses with a new coast-to-coast foot race during the coming spring, announced today that he had completed arrangements for a headquarters and training camp for the contestants at Rockaway Park, Long Island. The 1929 race is to be from New York to Los Angeles, reversing the route of its predecessor.

Although he is demanding a $300 entry fee from each contestant this year, Pyle said he expected to have 250 runners in line when the race starts on March 31. The promoter is leaving tomorrow in his "cruising coach" to map out the route of the race and establish "night controls" at cities and towns between here and Los Angeles.

The training camp at Rockaway Park will open March 11, Pyle said, and the runners will work out over boards, sand and cobble stones to accustom their feet to the varying conditions of the long trek to the coast.

Expects 30 Canadian Runners To Compete in Long Test.

Canada will be represented by at least 30 runners, according to the promoter, who says he has entries already on file from distance runners and walkers of Italy, Germany, France, Belgium, Switzerland, Finland, Sweden and South American countries.

Pyle added that there will be no charge to the public for watching the race, although he estimates that 15,000,000 people saw last year's event, which was won by Andy Payne, of Claremore, Okla. This year's prize money is announced as $60,000.

Golf Title of Bahamas To Miss Ada McKenzie

Nassau, Bahamas, Jan. 20 (A.P.).—Ada McKenzie, of Toronto, former Canandian champian, defeated Marie Jenney, of New York, former Metropolitan champion, 4 up and 3 to go, in yesterda's finals of the women's golf championship of the Bahamas.

In the semifinals Miss McKenzie defeated Miss Higbee, 7 to 5, and Miss Jenney defeated Miss Sherwood, 2 to 1.

The outstanding feature of the play was Miss McKenzie's exhibition of consistent golf throughout the tournament. In the Jenney-Sherwood match, the latter was 5 up on the first nine, but Miss Jenney put on a comeback that won the match for her on the seventeenth green.

Mehlhorn, 17 Below Par, Breaks World's Record

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 20 (U.P.).—"Wild Bill" Mehlhorn, Fenimore Country Club, New York City, won the $2,000 El Paso golf tournament today with a record-breaking score of 271 strokes for the 72 holes.

Mehlhorn's performance was 17 strokes below par, and established a new world's record for tournament play on a 6,500-yard course. The previous record was held by Johnny Farrell, whose score of 273 won the Miami event last year.

Bobby Cruikshank, Progress, N. Y., finished second with 277. Al Espinosa, Chicago, was third with 278, followed by Harry Cooper, Los Angeles, 280.

Almost the Naked Truth

—By JAMES S. COLLINS—

NEW YORK Jan. 20.—When Gene Tunney decided to kick back a piece of his ring earnings to provide a Muldoon-Tunney Trophy which should be emblematic of the heavyweight championship of the world he and Muldoon went into a protracted huddle to select trustees to take permanent custody of the trophy and act as a court of last appeal in passing on claims to the title Tunney was surrendering.

No one knows just how they made th selections, but they could have been made from the lists of private telephone numbers in the possession of both Tunney and Muldoon or by tossing a handful of birdshot into ringside sections reserved for members of the Madison Square Garden Club. At any rate, the trustees selected all were members of that club.

While no one questioned the high standing of Bernard Gimbel, Herbert Bayard Swope, John McE. Bowman, Jeremiah T. Mahoney and the late Tex Rickard as sportsmen, the fact that all were New Yorkers did not seem calculated to enhance the world prestige of the committee.

No Efforts Made to Give Body An International Flavor.

In order to give the committee international, or at least national, flavor, it was felt by some observers that at least one of the trustees might be picked from the considerable territory surrounding the Island of Manhattan. However, if indignation meetings were held anywhere about the parochial character of the committee, the Associated Press correspondents failed to report them.

In fact, some of the boxing fraternity right here in New York who were vitally interested in the heavyweight title situation exhibited a lack of interest in the Muldoon-Tunney Trophy that was positively disrespectful to its donor.

"The heavyweight championship," they said, in effect, "will be decided with five-ounce gloves on the hands of pugs and not with fountain pens in the hands of the Muldoon-Tunney committee. What earthly use is a trophy that you can't hock because you never actually get possession of it?"

The first decision of the committee, which is an important one, if only to the trustees, probably will not add a great deal to the prestige of the committee as boxing's high court of claims. The trustees have decided that the name of Tommy Burns, the

12 CITY CLUB BOUTS FOR TONIGHT

Lesser Matched With Filipino; Other Clubs Represented.

CITY CLUB members are expected to turn out en masse tonight for the club's first amateur boxing show of the year in the G street auditorium, where 11, and possibly 12, bouts, in all weight divisions except heavyweight, will be staged, the first to start at 8:30 o'clock.

A magnet in itself will be the bout in which Capt. Joe Lesser, City Club bantam, will trade punches with Florentine Colabia, billed as the amateur champion at 118 pounds, of Detroit. The home fans are not particularly desirous of watching the boy from Detroit, but are anxious to get a line on Lesser, whom Coach Joe Bateman is building up for a city title match later in the month.

Lesser is said to be at the peak of his form right now, while a belief is expressed by those who have watched him in recent workouts that he should show to better advantage than at any prior stage of his short and meteoric career. How good an opponent is Colabia will not be known until the bout begins, although his title indicates that he has something in the way of quality.

Nine City Club Boxers in Action On Program of 12 Bouts.

The program will include the appearance of nine City Club fighters, five from the Knights of Columbus Squad, six from Fort Washington and four unattached. Two bouts expected to be next in importance and interest to the Lesser-Colabia duel are the Stewart Ball-Leo Covleskie and Kenneth Bryan-Fred Bennett affairs.

Ball, representing the City Club, and Covleskie, of the K. of C., have met before, with Covleskie grabbing the decision on a slight margin. So tonight it will be a grudge scrap with Ball trying to prove the last decision was all a mistake.

Bryan is one of the most popular glove wielders the City Club has had and his many admirers look for him to score his third successive victory tonight. Only two months ago Bryan made his debut in the ring and won on that occasion. He since has scored another victory over a worthy Baltimore opponent. Bennett, a private from Fort Washington, is reported to be good enough to extend Bryan to the limit.

The program follows:

112 POUNDS—Hugo Stellablotta (C. C.) vs. Nevin Barber (K. of C.); Douglas Swetman (C. C.) vs. Humphrey Decola (K. of C.).

118 POUNDS—Joe Lesser (C. C.) vs. Florentine Colabia (Detroit).

120 POUNDS—Joe Tamagni (C. C.) vs. Private M. S. Marshym (Fort Washington).

130 POUNDS—Al Satryb (C. C.) vs. Private Arnold (Fort Washington).

135 POUNDS—Henry Slaughter (C. C.) vs. George Beckett (K. of C.).

138 POUNDS—Stewart Ball (C. C.) vs. Leo Covleskie (K. of C.).

130 POUNDS—Jack Trueland (Fort Washington) vs. Mickey Harrison (K. of C.).

160 POUNDS—Kenneth Bryan (C. C.) vs. Private Fred Bennett (Fort Washington).

172 POUNDS—Leighton Minor (C. C.) vs. K. O. Schwartz (unattached).

130 POUNDS—Dick Steel (unattached) vs. Private Leandoski (Fort Washington).

154 POUNDS—Private Drumbroski (Fort Washington) vs. Earl Yateman (unattached).

Amateur Boxer Dies From Ring Injuries

Ottawa, Canada, Jan. 20. (A.P.).—William Paul, who recently came to Ottawa from Hamilton, Ontario, died today from injuries received last night during a boxing bout at the Y. M. C. A. He was boxing with "Chuck" Agnew, Queens University athlete, and was knocked down, striking his head violently on the floor. He was taken to a hospital, where an operation was performed.

Philbrook, Notre Dame To Coach Nevada U.

Reno, Nev., Jan. 20 (A.P.).—George Philbrook, head football and track coach of Whittier College in California, has been selected as head coach of the University of Nevada Football Team for 1929, according to announcements from the university. Philbrook's name was selected from a list of applications which were filed shortly after the resignation of Lawrence T. "Buck" Shaw, head coach in 1927 and 1928.

Philbrook, who has been coaching football and track at the southern California institution since the fall of 1927, was All-Western tackle at Notre Dame in 1909-10 and was a member of the United States Olympic team in Stockholm in 1912 as a shot putter, discus thrower and decathlon entrant. Besides his experience at Whittier, Philbrook was football coach of the Multnomah Athletic Club, of Portland, from 1914 to 1920 and held the post of track coach at Idaho in 1926 and 1927.

European Skate Title Won by Ballangrud

Davos, Switzerland, Jan. 20 (United Press).—Lars Ballangrud, of Norway, today won the European speed skating championship of 1929, with Clas Thunberg, of Finland, second, and Larsen, of Norway, third.

The championship was decided upon a basis of times made by the competitors in four events. Ballangrud's victory in the final race today giving him the title. The new champion and Thunberg each won two events, setting two new world's records.

McLeod Makes Ace at Columbia, Another Scored 5 Minutes Later

A REMARKABLE record was established yesterday afternoon on the course of the Columbia Country Club when two players, with not more than five minutes intermission, scored aces on the same hole. Fred McLeod, the club professional, playing the sixteenth hole, holed out in one. He was making the round with a fivesome, the other four players being Norman B. Frost, Frederic N. Towers, James M. Johnston and Bruce Livie. This was the fourth time that McLeod has made a hole in one, his former achievements being on the Midlothian and Glen Oaks Clubs links in Chicago and the Country Club course of St. Louis. This was the first time, however, that he ever was able to get an ace on the course of the Columbia Club.

Almost immediately behind McLeod came C. C. VanLeer, playing with Hugh Warren and Joseph B. Bowling. VanLeer hit his tee shot and a few seconds later had the satisfaction of seeing the ball roll across the temporary green and drop into the cup.

DISTRICT SCHOLASTIC FIVES IN 17 GAMES THIS WEEK

Tech to Meet Eastern in Feature

Public Series Leaders Clash Tomorrow in Important Game.

Devitt Makes Debut in Prep League With Gonzaga Five.

A BUSY week, rivaling that of last week, when 20 games were on schedule, faces local scholastic basket ball teams this week with the playing of 17 games which will keep school fives in action from today until Saturday.

Headlining the card will be the high school series games of Tuesday and Friday and the Prep School League clash of Wednesday, which will bring Eastern and Tech and Central and Western together tomorrow; Central and Business and Tech and Western on Friday and Gonzaga against Devitt in the prep school game on Wednesday. The high school games as usual will be played in the Tech Gymnasium at 3:15 o'clock, with the Prep School League clash at the Boys' Club beginning at the same time.

Two games will start the ball rolling today, with St. John's and Eastern mixing at Eastern while Business and Maryland Freshmen play at College Park. Supplementing the high school clashes for tomorrow, listed above, will be games between Georgetown Prep and Hyattsville High School at Hyattsville; Emerson and St. Albans at St. Albans and Maryland Frosh against the Baltimore City College Five at College Park.

Eastern Plays Episcopal High At Alexandria Wednesday.

Eastern will engage the Episcopal High School Five at Alexandria, Va., in the lone game outside of the prep school clash for Wednesday. Thursday Eastern will again figure by playing Georgetown Prep at Garrett Park, with the Benjamin Franklin and Strayer's Quintets meeting in the St. Martin's Gymnasium in a night game at 8 o'clock.

Friday will find the Eastern Five at it again, this time against the Bliss Electrical School Team at Silver Spring, in one of the two games on tap outside of the high school tilts for this day. The St. John's Five will entertain the Leonard Hall Cadets at St. John's in the other game, the starting time of which is 8 o'clock, the same as for the Eastern-Bliss contestt.

Eastern and Georgetown Prep will furnish the action for Saturday with the former going to Hagerstown, Md., for a battle with the Hagerstown High School Five, and Georgetown Prep entertaining Swavely at Garrett Park.

Much interest is being manifested in the results of the High and Prep School League clashes of tomorrow, Wednesday and Friday. In the high school games much concern is being affixed to the Eastern-Tech clash of tomorrow, the ultimate settling of the title hanging in the balance.

Tech, With Four Victories, Faces Test Against Sanborn's Five.

Tech, the leader in the race at present, with four wins in as many starts, will be up against its greatest test of the schedule in meeting Eastern, which started poorly but which has come back with a rush of late. A victory for Eastern will create a tie for first place, with anything likely to happen later. On the other hand, a victory for the Manual Trainers will give them once more the commanding lead they enjoyed before Eastern's spurt.

Victory for Tech on Friday over Western would virtually clinch the title if they can beat Eastern tomorrow.

The Prep School League clash on Wednesday will mark the debut of the Devitt Prep Five in the league, with a second victory in as many starts the opportunity for Gonzaga. Gonzaga got off to a good start last week by defeating St. John's, 26 to 14, in the opener, although the Devitt Team has not shown as much as either St. John's or Gonzaga to date, it is a safe contention that it will give the latter club a real fight Wednesday in its first appearance.

TRIS GETS VETERANS.

Vic Aldridge and Russell Wrightstone were sold by the Giants to Newark of the International League, where the two veterans will pastime under Tris Speaker's banner.

AMBIDEXTROUS GOLFER.

GARRISON. Well, boys, you can start Blue Monday by getting off on the right foot on a real melon down at the Fair Grounds. This genuine sleeper has drawn an inside post position and all sails have been set. Just a question of how far the rider will elect to win by. All this takes place in the second spasm. Just let your conscience be your guide.

PARNELL BOUND could win the opener, but is on the also eligible list and may not get to start. BETTY BELL has outside post position, which is quite a disadvantage, but she figures to be right there at the finish.

In the third LAFTAR may be good enough to score. This race, however, should be passed along to your neighbor.

MANZANA is both consistent and good and is entitled to the call for the fourth, while BOCARATONE may again surprise by beating a fair field in the fifth.

HOROLOGE has been pitted properly and is due to earn brackets in the sixth.

For the closing heat just string along with BILL HARE and collect.

QUARANTE is the hot tamale down in Miami. This daughter of Fair Play has been burning up the track and should graduate from the maiden ranks in the second race.

The opener at this track is for the baby performers and the Wilson-Salmon pair have shown best in private trials.

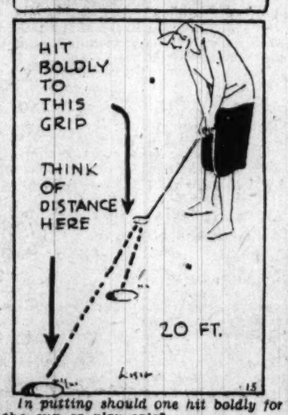
GOLF AS CHAMPIONS PLAY IT



In putting should one hit boldly for the cup or play safe?

By JOHNNY FARRELL

Winner of Eastern, Metropolitan, Wheeling, Massachusetts, Philadelphia, Chicago and Pennsylvania Open Championships, 1927; LaGorce Open, 1928; Tied for Bahamas Open, 1928; National Open, 1928.

(1) In putting there are two things to keep in mind. On an approach putt of 20 feet or more you should think more of the distance you have to cover. The distance is really more important than direction on a long putt of this kind, so that playing safe is more important than hitting for the cup.

(2) In any putt under 20 feet you should hit boldly for the cup as there is not much danger of over-running the distance enough to miss the next shot.

Almost the Naked Truth

Canadian, who was universally recognized as champion after he had cleaned up all the American contenders and the champions of England and Australia, will not be included in the list of heavyweight champions which will be inscribed on the trophy.

When Jeffries retired in 1905, it will be recalled, he "presented" his title to Marvin Hart after the latter had defeated Jack Root. Practically no one besides Jeffries and Hart took the "presentation" seriously, however, and it was not until Tommy Burns had beaten Hart, Gunner Moir of England and Bill Squires, of Australia, that he was generally acknowledged as champion. The only formidable contender he had not beaten was the negro, Jack Johnson, who had been beaten by Hart.

Jack Johnson Was Recognized Champion in Jeffries Bout.

Johnson himself recognized Burns as champion and challenged him to defend the title. When Johnson defeated Burns in Australia in 1908, no one disputed his right to the title, and when Jeffries emerged from retirement two years later in an effort to regain it, he fought as challenger and Johnson as champion. If Burns did not hold the title when he fought, Johnson, where did Johnson get it? Even Jeffries acknowledged that the black man was the world's champion before they fought.

In explaining the exclusion of Burns, the trustees declare that championships can be won only in the ring. Presumably, then, they date Johnson's reign from the day he defeated Jeffries, who had been in retirement, undefeated, for five years at that time. If Jeffries had not come out of retirement, how could Johnson or any one else ever have acquired the championship?

Possibly the trustees agree with William Muldoon that when a champion retires undefeated his title should revert to the man from whom he won it. In that case when Jeffries retired Bob Fitzsimmons, whom he followed, should be recognized as Jeff's successor and Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, the first man to whip Fitzsimmons after Jeff retired, should be included in the trustees' list of the elite.

If the trustees are to proceed on the principle that the title can be won only in the ring, how are they to determine who is Tunney's successor? The chances are 1,000 to 1 that Tunney will not come back, as Jeffries did, but no one, not even boxing's high court of claims, can say positively that he will not. So it seems that, to be consistent, the trustees can never extend their present list.

Perhaps the trustees of the trophy can explain when and where John L. Sullivan ever won the championship of the world, but no one else can. But John L. was generally recognized as such, and there will be no quarrel over his inclusion in the list. Tommy Burns likewise was so recognized, and there would have been no quarrel over his inclusion, either.

Crease in Christner's Trousers Separated Him From Laborers.

K. O. Christner, the Akron heavyweight who socked Knute Hensen out of the ensemble, did not look like a coming champion when he was introduced from the Garden ring the night of the Lomski-Braddock fight last week. The baldish, heavily built veteran looked more like a fighter who had found himself too late. It was not until the Garden publicity purveyors sent out photographs purporting to show Christner working as a laborer in the Eighth Avenue subway excavation that he stirred a reminiscence of Jack Dempsey in the full flush of his physical prowess. One picture showed Christner, collarless and bundled up to the ears in a Mackinaw, operating a tractor. From the waist up he suggested the insatiable glutton for labor.

Only the pristine gleam of his highly polished oxfords and a grease in his natty trousers that one could sharpen a pencil with betrayed the fact that the photograph was just another bit of hoole, like the one Dempsey had taken as a shipyard "worker" when the draft threatened to blow him into the Army in 1917. The effect of the Dempsey picture, which portrayed him attired in spotless denim, operating a riveter, was weakened somewhat by the fact that it also showed him wearing patent leather shoes with suede tops.

COLLEGE RING TITLE AIM OF G. U.

Hilltop Team in First Test Friday With W. Maryland.

HAVING set their goal as the intercollegiate championship, the Georgetown University boxers will take a long step forward if they win the match Friday night with the ringmen of Western Maryland College in Ryan Gymnasium on the Hilltop.

Today Coach Jim McNamara will send the Hoya leather pushers through a long workout with a view to determining the personnel of the Blue and Gray team which will be making its debut of the season in the approaching engagement. One or two places are still open, and when they are definitely filled McNamara believes he will send the strongest ring team in Georgetown's history into action against the Green Terrors.

The Terrors loom as just about as capable a lot as the Hoyas will be called on to tackle this year. One of the best in college ranks last season, Western Maryland has opened the current campaign with a victory over Virginia Military Academy, four bouts to three.

Norris, Sectional Welter Champ, In Visitors' Line-Up.

Ring worms on hand Friday night will see the South Atlantic welterweight champion, Dick Norris, captain of the Terrors, and one of the hardest punching collegiate boxers in the country in Bob Ekaitis, a middleweight.

In the V. M. I. match Ekaitis continued his kayo fisticuffing by stopping Cadet Kohout in the first round, which incidentally is Ekaitis' favorite round for victories. Last year the sturdy Western Maryland middleweight put the dream punch on opponents from Georgetown, Penn, New York U and Yale in the first stanza.

Capt. Norris was defeated in the V. M. I. bouts by the narrowest of margins, his opponent, Chapman, gaining the decision by dint of a third-round rally. Western Maryland victories, in addition to that of Ekaitis, were registered by Klepac, light-heavyweight, who knocked out Cadet Palmer; Jiggs Downer, heavyweight, who won over Gravatt on a foul in the third round, and Crosby, featherweight, who defeated Johenning in three rounds on a decision.

Only Holders of Athletic Tickets May Obtain Invitations.

Hart, Western Maryland lightweight, was knocked out by Capt. Gordon of V. M. I., and Callahan, bantamweight, lost by decision to Rogers of V. M. I. in the other bouts taken by the Cadets.

Henry Murphy, whom Coach McNamara is grooming for the intercollegiate title in his class, probably will oppose Norris Friday night. Charley Fiah is likely to be the Georgetown opponent for the dangerous Ekaitis. This pair of three-rounders should attract main interest. Seven bouts comprise the entire card.

Those desiring to obtain invitations for all Georgetown boxing shows may obtain the same by applying at the director of athletic's office at the Hilltop. These invitations will only be extended to those who

JEWISH Community Center Teams had a field day yesterday in games in the Center Gymnasium. The Unlimiteds won their ninth straight game at the expense of the French A. C., 51 to 35, in the feature tilt of the group, with the Flashes routing the Boys Club Standards, 60 to 34, and the Whirlwinds handing the Meridians almost an equal rout in a 49-to-25 game.

The Unlimiteds had to stage an uphill fight to win against the French tossers, who played a stubborn brand of basket ball during the first half. With the score 33 to 29 against them, the Unlimiteds held the French to 7 points after the intermission, while they piled up points with rapidity to finally win by a large margin.

Abramson, Kramer and Levine Lead Unlimited Scorers.

Abramson, Kramer and L. Levine were high scorers for the Center Five, with 12, 12 and 10 points, respectively. Anderson and Webb were outstanding players for the French Team.

Understein, of the Flashes, was the big gun, with 17 points, against the Boys Club Standards, while Conklin and Polinger were consistent markermen for the Whirlwinds against the Meridians.

All three of the games were briskly played, with the Center Teams, with the exception of the Unlimited-French game, easily won.

EAGLES BEAT BALTIMORE TOSSERS

Rally in Second Half to Down Maryland Collegians, 34-25.

ENGAGING in one of the hardest games they probably will play this season, the Skinker Bros. Eagles maintained their winning stride yesterday by defeating the Maryland Collegians, 34 to 25, in the Congress Heights gymnasium. The Collegians were scheduled at the last minute when the Miami A. C. of Miami, Fla., canceled due to an auto accident in which members of the team were injured.

The Eagles had to fight for their game yesterday, and all of the way, as those witnessing it will testify. The Collegians displayed unexpected strength at the start and showed the way in acquiring a 14 to 10 advantage by half time. Richmond was their chief scorer. All told, he registered four field goals and seven fouls for fifteen points.

It was Ralph Bennie who took things into his own hands for the Eagles. Bennie went wild in the second half and it was his scoring work that enabled the Eagles to get into the lead and win the game. Bennie totaled seven baskets and two foul tosses for sixteen points for the afternoon.

Eagles, Led by Bennie, Rally In Second Half to Win.

Right after the intermission with the score 14 to 10 against them, Bennie started an Eagle spurt by inserting a basket on the first tap-off with Jack Faber making good two foul tosses one or two moments later to tie the score. Two baskets by Gwynn King in rapid succession got the Eagles into the lead and Bennie's work kept them on top from this time on.

Manager Bernie Peacock has arranged two interesting attractions for the week, the Quantico Marines for Wednesday night and the Knights of Columbus Five of Cumberland, Md., for Sunday. This latter attraction promises to be the best for the Eagles so far this season, as the Cumberland Caseys come with the rating as being Cumberland champs for several seasons in a row.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

MOTHER DREAMS.

The little mother looks away
Across the world so wide,
And sees a man, erect and straight,
Clean-handed, face to face with fate
And smiles on him in pride.

The little mother dreams by day
A thousand dreams or more,
Of one who, down the lane of years,
Shall kiss away her bitter tears
When all the dreaming's o'er.

And low she hums a lullaby,
And, oh, so proud is she!
Above the cradle where he lies
Always the visions brightly rise
Of one who is to be.

And when comes one, like you or me,
Though neither brave nor stout,
The mother loves him, just as though
He were the prince of long ago
She dreamed so much about.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES McDONALD

THE men are asking for protection! Somebody wants a law to prohibit women from going about smiling and causing trouble. Somebody else demands legislation to prevent married women from "turning the heads" of young men still in their teens. Some one else suggests serious penalties for rouge and lipstick on women over 35.

Now we rise to ask what all this shouting means. Women have smiled since "Dante first beheld Beatrice" and long before that—with more or less fatal effect. "Young men still in school" have been suffering from palpitations more or less serious since the days when Helen of Troy is credited with having robbed Paris of his reason just by looking at him through her eyelashes. These things occur, and nature seems to expect them to occur.

Now we have a reader of stern sex who wants the women folk to rock the cradle instead of flirting and asking lifts of strangers in parked cars.

Dear Miss McDonald: Statistics show that New York City boasts of almost 1,000,000 bachelors. There is a reason for that many, to be sure. Women and young girls identify "emancipation" with shirking of natural duties. Formerly she was (never intended to be, however) man's slave, and now she is his problem.

When I marry I want a home and as many children as I can comfortably support. Then you will see me rarely in a restaurant, and club life would have little attraction. But women nowadays are ashamed (?) to have children. They abhirk the duties as a mother, but insist, however, on the rest of the "marital bliss," besides think of nothing but outshining their neighbor on dresses and ornaments, whether poor hubby can afford it or not. If their wishes are not compiled with they find a "boy friend" who is eager and willing to satisfy their heart's craving. Oh, no—he asks for no returns. He is satisfied to behold her angel face, once in a while. Oh, yes.

Some women's whole being seems to be permeated with nothing but "jazz," there is not an ounce of earnestness to be detected.

So why do we stay single? The frivolous nature of many women and more girls makes it impossible to make a home. You may be married 20 years; along comes a sheik and, if your wife loses her head and respect, another home is wrecked.

A reader asks for a law to prevent married women from vamping the youths. Married women are accepting "lifts" from strangers for the "thrill." Flirting with young boys for the "fun." Two ladies, each in rather expensive fur coats. The trolley was not at hand, so they trotted off. I watched them. Several parked cars on the curb. In one was a lady—they passed it. Then they spied a man in a two-seater. A few words and gestures and off they went, the three of them. Equal rights? Supposing I would have approached the lone lady and asked for a lift. Why she would have summoned the police. Had I flirted, however, with one of these, they would have me arrested for two reasons: to get money off me, and to "convince" the world of their angelic innocence.

It is scandalous how many have observed accepting rides under similar circumstances from perfect strangers, school kids to above 30. If "something" happens, man is blamed. If you hold against us, that we prefer single life to being "tied down," the blame is again yours; you make it possible. We men are no longer blind. We refuse to feed and clothe a wife and cater to her every whim and in return have her entertain one and a half dozen "soul mates." That is why we don't marry. Regretfully, F. S.

Radio Sets Ready Now For Any Use

Centralized System Makes Possible Programs in Hotels or Hospitals, or at Whatever Point Transients May Be.

The transient in the hotel, or the patient in the hospital, can now enjoy radio programs without having to own a radio set. The tenant with his favorite radio set can now plug into a convenient wall plate for antenna and ground connections, assured of an efficient installation. Centralized radio is what the new system is called, and it ushers in a new day for large-scale broadcast reception.

Centralized radio has been evolved out of the necessity of accommodating dozens and sometimes hundreds of radio listeners under one roof. In the case of the hotel or hospital, with its transient listeners-in, the problem has been one of supplying radio programs from a central radio receiver, in sufficient variety and range of volume to meet individual needs and tastes. In the case of apartment houses and apartment hotels with their more permanent tenants, the problem has been one of suitable antenna and ground accommodation for the many receiving sets where, obviously, a jungle of antennas on the roof and lead-ins on the walls are both unsightly and inefficient.

For the transient listener-in there has been developed some highly specialized equipment in the form of a centralized radio receiver, an efficient distribution system, and suitable outlets and sound-reproducing equipment for each room, apartment or ward.

The engineering staffs of the Radio Corporation of America and its associates, the General Electric and Westinghouse Companies, have succeeded in developing equipment that meets the requirements of audio centralized radio.

This is not to be confused with a conventional radio receiver and amplifier, connected with scattered loudspeakers and head phones throughout a building, for the parallel ceases after the basic principle.

The RCA audio centralized radio equipment takes the form of the necessary units mounted in standard switchboard form. One receiver, with amplifying equipment, distribution and outlet equipment, constitutes one channel. One channel is required for the reception and distribution of one program. However, more than one complete unit can be employed, and as many as four channels can be installed so that the listener-in may choose any one of four simultaneous programs.

During the program the other night, Tom Robertson, "Old King Tut" and announcer for Station WJSV, said that a long-distance telephone call had been received from Groton, Conn. The station was coming in so strong that while the listener was talking to him, Robertson could hear WJSV's program quite plainly over the telephone line.

The directive radio beacon transmitting set at College Park, Md., has been rewired to facilitate a change-over from the visual to the aural system, and also, when operated as a visual beacon, to permit the use of either Heising modulation with vacuum tube-driven tuning forks supplying the modulation frequencies or a. c. plate modulation by means of constant driven alternators of the proper frequencies.

Into the lands of frozen seas, out beyond the fringes of civilization, WBZ-WBZA, Boston, will wing messages of good cheer in the eleventh broadcast of the Winchester Arctic-Antarctic programs next Saturday night, January 26, beginning at 10 o'clock our time and lasting four hours. The broadcast will seek out many individuals with its messages and greetings, among them Commander Richard E. Byrd and members of his Antarctic expedition. The messages, already accumulating in large numbers, will also take note of the hardy voyageurs, explorers, traders and adventurers who trek the Arctic year after year.

Smart Sweater Suit.

A decidedly smart little sweater suit for either town or country wear consists of a bright blue pleated skirt with sweater and cardigan to match. The cardigan has a narrow band of gray krimmer around the neck and down the two fronts, which adds immensely to the becomingness of the costume.

The Flowered Frock.

The evening gown of the moment is made of flowered chiffon, with a large single blossom as the motif on a white background.

Colored Leather Shoes.

Shoes of colored leather have high heels and a single strap. The leather o toes and heels is cut out in round holes and a contrasting color placed beneath. Red and blue and black and beige are among the combinations.

Hat of White Felt.

White Silk Sleeveless Frock.

A pleated skirt of white crepe de chine has a tunic of white silk, which has an extremely deep border of black and yellow stripes. The tunic is sleeveless, of course.

50 Quail to Be Liberated.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 20 (Special).—Fifty Bob White quail have been received by Capt. George D. Whitmore here from the State game and fish commission for liberation in this county. They were bought from a breeder in Meridian, Miss. They will not be released until after the cold weather has abated.

Jane Interprets the Mode

New York, Jan. 21, 1929.

THE new trend toward contrasts of light and dark colors in the same costume or ensemble, of which we spoke recently, finds expression in several of the collections and in numerous ways.

For example, Drecoll-Beer is showing a novel ensemble, which includes a coat of light green trimmed in gray squirrel and lined in black crepe de chine, worn over a black crepe dress, which is faced and trimmed in the same shade of light green.

Green and Black Effective.

Green and black are particularly effective for a combination of this sort, since they provide the necessary contrast, yet go together so well that no color clash is suggested.

It is, of course, nothing new to line the coat in the same material or color as the dress, but to further extend this principle to include the trimming of the dress with pipings and facing of the outer coat material brings a particularly happy unity into the scheme.

Bear this thought in mind in selecting your next ensemble—an outfit built around such an ensemble can not fail to be chic.

POPULAR LINGERIE.

A tailored set, a dressier set and an adorably goofy and impractical lace set—that's what we tell you how to make in this week's illustrated leaflet, for which you may se your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare department of The Washington Post.

What kind of set? Why, a step-in and matching vest—the most popular type of lingerie for the modern silhouette, by the way.

SEEN HITHER AND YON.

Three typical Bernard et Cie costumes have I illustrated for you today. The tailored suit is of broad-tail, a smart winter conceit for tailleurs, and the dress and coat are an ensemble in deep red, the coat trimmed with zibeline, and the dress showing charming novelty of line and imagination in its silhouette and finish.

Tomato red combined with mauve gray.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

OBSERVATIONS ON FLU.

THIS Christmas I had to lend a hand as a family practitioner, something I have not done for many years. The flu was widespread in the city before I left, and it developed on the plantation and in the whole country round about within a few days after my arrival. The physicians were all overworked. They could not make all the visits they were called on to make and I had to "take a hand."

The cases I saw began with a general involvement of the respiratory tract that differed in some ways from an ordinary coryza. The throat was sore, but it was a diffuse redness with no special swelling of the tonsils. The nose cold did not go through the stages of oozing of watery fluid, then discharge of mucus, yellow pus, and white mucopus in succession. In these cases there was no watery secretion stage. Unlike the epidemic of 1918, there was no nosebleed or tendency to hemorrhage into the lungs or anywhere else.

The cough was about as deep and of about the same quality on the first day of illness as it was later on. There was none of the usual progress of an acute coryza from the nose to the bronchial tubes. The fever was several degrees higher than in acute coryza, or the common cold. Temperatures over 102 were frequent and 104 was not unusual. The aching was not as great as in an ordinary severe cold. The exhaustion after the attack was greater. The fever had a way of coming back after it had gone off. Recurrences or relapses were frequent.

I saw one case with the earmarks of the epidemic of 1918. In this case the face was dusky red, the sputum was tinged with blood, and the mind was foggy. The patient was moderately toxic. At the time these symptoms were present, air was getting into all parts of the lungs and there was no dullness. The leucocyte count was 10,000 and there were bronchial rales heard over both lungs. It is possible that there was a small patch of deep pneumonia, but it is just as likely that all of the symptoms were due to a flu infection, with considerable lung involvement, but no pneumonia.

In all the section where I was I heard of no cases of pneumonia, and, so far as we could judge by rumor, the death rate was not raised. In fact, in a radius of more than 30 miles the only deaths were one due to poison whisky and several due to two automobile accidents. The automobile was proving more deadly than the flu.

The treatment which was used consisted principally of putting the patients to bed and keeping them there, of giving very little food, having them drink plenty of water, and giving such remedies as were needed to meet symptoms. Most of them got along with no medicine except alkalines, sprays, warm or cool applications, and an occasional dose of acetyl salicylic acid.

TODAY'S WOMEN

By EARL MINDERMAN

JANUARY 21.

HELEN H. GARDENER, one of the most widely read authors of her day, was born this day, 1853.

Besides writing novels which were sold by the thousands, she was a frequent contributor of articles on science to the magazines and lectures in many parts of the United States. Her first book, "A Thoughtless Yes," appeared in 1890. This she followed with two novels, "Is This Your Son, My Lord?" and "Pray You, Sir, Whose Daughter?" These novels deal with the double standard of morals and reflect her keen interest in and study of heredity. They had a wide influence. Her "An Unofficial Patriot" is one of the important books on the Civil War, revealing many hitherto unknown historical facts. A play adapted from the book was produced in 1899.

Zelda Sears, the actress, was born this day, 1873. Her earlier successes included Clyde Fitch's plays. For ten years she appeared under the management of Charles Frohman. Among her starring vehicles was "The Nest Egg." She wrote the musical comedies, "Lady Billy," "The Clinging Vine," "Lollipop" and "The Magic Ring." She also contributed to magazines.

Mrs. Frederick Yates Brunton, noted English actress, was born this day, 1799.

Changing Ways of the Near East.

A LITTLE while ago there came news from Afghanistan. The natives were causing trouble because of efforts their king and queen had made to bring about the use of "European clothes."

The trouble seems to have been chiefly about the trousers for the men—they preferred the old "baggy" style.

Bokharian women wearing veils in the old fashion as they travel.

Afghan women, it appears, have not made any special protest against removing their veils. I fancy that they are glad to be rid of them.

News about the Afghans brings to mind the changes going on in the dress and customs of the "Near East." Turks, Persians and others have been taking on new ways, though we must not suppose that all of them have done so.

The change which has most impressed the Western world, is the taking off of the veils by the women. For 2,000 years or more, women of the Near East have been in the habit of covering their faces except for their eyes. The common rule was that no man except father, brother or husband should see them without a veil.

Before the World War, the veil custom showed signs of beginning to pass; but it is only in the past dozen years that strong steps have been taken to that end. Now you may see many a native woman on the streets of an Eastern city—boldly letting men gaze upon her nose, mouth and chin!

Women of the present time go about the streets of those countries far more often than they used to do. The old rule was to stay in their homes as much as possible, leaving only for some very important reason.

The prophet Mohammed said that women ought to remain close to home, and that they must wear veils. These customs had been observed before his day, and he wanted them kept up. By taking off their veils Eastern women are breaking a rule of religion—but it seems that they are doing something which is good for their health and enjoyment of life.

What Today Means to You

JANUARY 21
By MARY BLAKE

AQUARIUS.

IF January 21 is your birthday, the most propitious hours for you today are from 9 a. m. to 10 a. m., from noon to 2:15 p. m., from 4:45 p. m. to 5:45 p. m., and from 10:15 p. m. to 11:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 10:45 a. m. to 11:45 a. m. and from 6:15 p. m. to 7:15 p. m.

Today's planetary aspects advice patience, and it would be wise for those who are prone to be reckless and nervous to heed the advice. "Patience is the greatest of all shock absorbers. The only thing you can get in a hurry is trouble." Regard this as the keynote of the prevalent influences!

The child born today will show great aptitude for studies of a mathematical trend. It would seem that it will be well fitted basically for the engineering profession. It will be affectionate, and have a well-balance and keen mind.

You are self-reliant, careful and shrewd. This triumvirate of ideal business traits should take you far in the world of success and prosperity. The care you take in selecting employes and servants forbids any weak links in the structure of either your home or business, and paves the way for careful and methodical work. Your ability to interpret the actions of others is well nigh psychic, and makes it comparatively easy for you to detect deception.

You take life rather seriously and can never see the funny side of things. This is the only disparagement in an otherwise very fine and lovable nature, and you should remember that one of the best things to have up your sleeve is a "funnybone." You have many friends. You love music and art, and are very fond of outdoor sports and pastimes. This propensity has shown very prominently during the whole course of your life, and is very much in evidence because of your fine and rugged physique. You should live to a ripe old age.

You will experience a normal and fairly happy life. Your marital relations will be smooth and fine, though marked by occasional "ups and downs."

Successful people born on January 21: Charles Nisbet, educator. Francis E. Spinner, politician and financier. John C. Fremont, explorer and soldier. Horace Wells, physician. Thomas J. (Stonewall) Jackson, soldier. Helen H. Gardner, author.

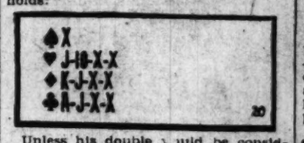
WORK ON BRIDGE

THE rue for determining whether a double is intended to be business or informatory is: a double is business when made of a bid of two or more No Trumps, four or more of a suit, or of any bid after partner of doubler has bid or doubled. A double is informatory when made of one No Trump or one, two or three of a suit provided partner of doubler has not previously bid or doubled.

The only exception occurs when an original one No Trump is overcalled immediately by two of a suit. In that case a double by the partner of the No Trumper is informatory.

A modern bidder will not bid two of a suit over a No Trump unless, with partner's help he has a good chance of game. When strong with a No Trump against him, he does not expect his partner to furnish more than two tricks; so he does not overcall a No Trump at a love score unless he has eight trickks in a Major suit or nine in a Minor. So little can be gained by a business double of such bid, and a doubling opportunity would be wasted if the informatory double could not be used.

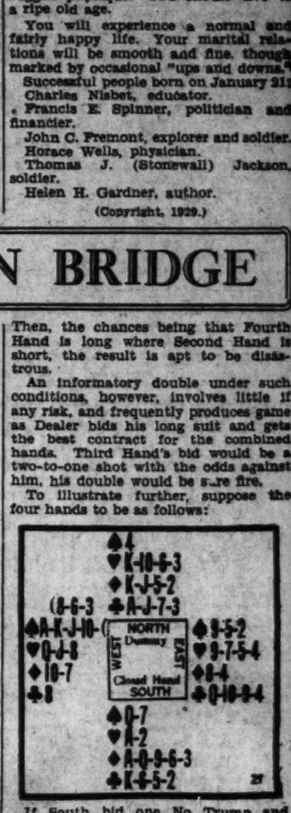
Suppose Dealer bids No Trump, Second Hand two Spades, and Third Hand holds:



Unless his double would be considered informatory, Third Hand would have to pass. To bid three Hearts, Diamonds or Clubs, even with a No Trump hand as Dummy, would be too great a risk. If Third Hand's bid should happen to name Dealer's best suit, it would succeed; but the odds are two to one against that coincidence. Dealer naturally will assume a bid of three made by Third Hand is supported by a strong five-card suit and may advance it further with but three cards of the suit in his own hand. Then, the chances being that Fourth Hand is long where Second Hand is short, the result is apt to be disastrous.

An informatory double under such conditions, however, involves little if any risk, and frequently produces game as Dealer bids his long suit and gets the best contract for the combined hands. Third Hand's bid would be a two-to-one shot with the odds against him, his double would be sure fire.

To illustrate further, suppose the four hands to be as follows:



If South bid one No Trump and West two Spades, North—should he bid—would choose Hearts (the major suit) or Clubs (the stronger of his Minors) and neither bid would go game; but if he doubled informatorily, South would bid Diamonds and go game.

PHIPPS WITHDRAWS OBJECTION TO FREE JUNIOR HIGH BOOKS

ORIGINAL BILL IN SENATE BACKED BY CIVIC GROUPS

Zihlman Sponsoring Measure Slated for House to Supply Texts in All Schools.

Senator Phipps (Republican), of Colorado, has agreed to withdraw his objections to the bill providing free textbooks for students in the local public schools, providing the Senate accept an amendment to the bill which would limit free educational supplies to students up to and including the junior high schools.

The free textbook bill has come up for consideration on the unanimous consent calendar of the Senate several times recently, but has failed of passage only through the objection, unexplained heretofore, of Senator Phipps.

The amendment to the bill has been offered to the Senate committee on education, it was learned last night, and is to be considered by the committee during the next few days.

Original Bill Advocated.

Henry Gilligan, member of the Board of Education, and one of those most active in the fight to obtain free textbooks for students of all grades in the public schools, last night said:

"Although it is gratifying to me to know that Senator Phipps is in favor of providing free text books and supplies to students in the junior high schools, it seems to me that the Senate would do better to pass the bill as originally presented to the Senate for action, inasmuch as it has the unanimous indorsement of the Board of Trade, other civic bodies and all educational organizations in the District of Columbia."

Zihlman Sponsors Measure.

Representative Frederick N. Zihlman, chairman of the House District committee, has taken an active interest in obtaining free text books for junior and senior high school students in the public schools of the District and is sponsor for a bill of this nature which soon will come up for consideration in the House.

Under the present law, free text books and supplies are provided children in the elementary schools and those in the seventh and eighth grades in the junior high schools. Students attending the ninth grade in the junior high schools and those in the senior high schools are forced to purchase their own books and supplies, although the parents of many of them are held unable to afford the expense of the school supplies.

Capital Air Clubs Unite Tomorrow

Two Groups' Membership Expected to Number 200 After Merger.

An aeronautical organization consisting of 200 active members will come into being tomorrow at noon when the District Chapter of the National Aeronautical Association and the Aero Club of Washington meet at the Carlton Hotel to perfect a merger of memberships and interests. The new organization will be known as the Aero Club of Washington Chapter of the National Aeronautic Association.

The decision to merge the two clubs was reached at a recent meeting of the board of management of the Aero Club. On motion of Dr. George W. Lewis, director of research of the national advisory committee for aeronautics and governor of the National Aeronautic Association for the District of Columbia, the entire membership of the District Chapter, N. A. A. was unanimously accepted in to membership in the Aero Club without initiation fee.

The Aero Club was incorporated January 28, 1909, "to foster interest in the principles and development of aeronautics." Gen. James Allen is president of the Aero Club and Henry Berliner is president of the District Chapter of the N. A. A.

May 6 Date Sought For Trial of Fall

Application will be made today before Justice William Hitz in the District Supreme Court to schedule May 6 for trial of bribery charges against Albert B. Fall, former Secretary of the Interior. United States Attorney Leo A. Rover will appear for the Government and William Leahy, local member of Fall counsel, for the defense.

The former Cabinet officer is charged with accepting a $100,000 bribe from Edward L. Doheny, oil magnate of Los Angeles, as an inducement to lease the naval oil reserve at Elk Hills, Calif., to a company operated by Doheny. The money, it is alleged, was delivered to Fall by Doheny's son in a "little black bag."

The Government recently abandoned an attempt to have the trial set during the winter months. A physician, commissioned by the court, and Government physicians examined Fall and reported his health would not permit him to come to the Capital for trial during the cold weather.

COMMITTEES SPEED PLANS FOR PROGRAM WEEK OF INAUGURAL

Parade Chairmen to Meet on Wednesday to Outline Final Formation.

WEATHER CONDITIONS WILL NOT HALT FETE

Preferences Expressed by Hoover Being Worked Into Ceremony.

While President-elect Hoover enjoys Florida's summer time this week and concentrates on his inaugural address and the selection of his Cabinet, the general inaugural committee, under Col. U. S. Grant 3d, will seek to definitely carry out the preferences he expressed during his stay here.

Plans for the inaugural parade are assuming the form of finality, and at a meeting of the committee chairmen Wednesday it is thought that Maj. Gen. Anton Stephan, parade committee chairman, will report on the arrangements for the civic division, which is to be made up of various units representing all phases of American activity.

Civic Demonstration Planned.

Other committees, their work made more definite by Mr. Hoover's visit to the Capital, will continue the preparation necessary to the adequate civic demonstration which the general committee has promised.

The plan of Mrs. Virginia White Speel, chairman of the housing committee, to be able to care for 150,000 visitors has been accepted appreciatively in view of advices already received from States indicating that great numbers of persons will visit the Capital for the three-day inaugural period.

Weather Is Considered.

Although weather conditions on March 4 should not affect the number of visitors, inclement weather would cause a restriction of outdoor activity, and the general committee is prepared to fit the civic demonstration to the weather without inconveniencing visitors or detracting from the dignity of the ceremony. A large number of unofficial receptions, musicales and similar entertainments, including programs of a large chorus under direction of Percy Foster, are expected to prove attractive to visitors.

The first mass appearance of a new style roll collar Army overcoat will be in the inaugural parade, March 4, Secretary of War Davis authorizing the manufacture of 118,000 of these overcoats for issue to enlisted men, and the first troops to receive them will be those participating in the parade.

After parade troops have been supplied, issues will be made to remaining troops, beginning with those in colder climates. Issue of these overcoats is the latest of several measures to improve the uniform of enlisted men, new model caps, a new style of garrison shoes and roll collar blouses being other innovations to provide comfort and smartness.

FORMER PATROLMAN FACING TWO TRIALS

CALL FIREARMS EXPERTS

Accused of an attempt to murder Edward M. Taylor, 28 years old, discharged policeman, will go on trial tomorrow before Chief Justice Walter I. McCoy in criminal division of the District Supreme Court.

The prosecution, which will be conducted by Assistant District Attorney William H. Collins, will depend mainly upon the testimony of firearms experts in an effort to convict Taylor.

While a motorcycle patrolman of the Traffic Bureau Taylor, it is charged, shot William S. McBreen, gasoline filling station employe, in the back while the latter was seated in the station at 2637 Benning road northeast on August 30, 1927. Earlier in the day, according to police, Taylor engaged in a bitter argument with Henry Finke, another employe of the station, and threatened to "get" Finke.

The argument with Finke arose when the filling-station employe is said to have admitted to Taylor that he took $5 from an envelope which was left at the filling station for the policeman by two negroes. McBreen told police the negroes were rum runners and were in the habit of leaving envelopes at the station for Taylor, which, it is charged, contained "easy money."

Following the shooting, McBreen lay gravely wounded in Casualty Hospital for several weeks. The prosecution will attempt to prove through firearms experts that the bullet which was taken from McBreen's body was fired from the revolver used by Taylor during his service with the Police Department. Attorney Joseph Solomon will conduct the defense of the former patrolman.

Taylor also faces trial on a charge of hi-jacking. He was indicted last March on accusations of waylaying a whisky-laden truck at Fourteenth street and Maryland avenue northeast and making off with the illicit cargo. The truck belonged to Ernest Burkhalter and several weeks before the indictment was returned was exhibited to members of Congress by Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas. Blanton used the incident as the opening wedge for a bitter attack on the Police Department, which included accusations of protecting rum runners and was climaxed by drinking charges against Maj. Edwin B. Hesse, superintendent of police.

Police Told to Protect Street Car Passengers

Maj. Edwin B. Hesse, superintendent of police, yesterday ordered his force to safeguard pedestrians and street car passengers at loading and unloading points.

Motorists so obstruct space at street car stops and crossings that "it is almost impossible for persons to get on or off street cars without literally forcing themselves through lines of automobiles in order to reach the cars from the curb," Hesse said in a general order to precinct commanders. "Members of the force are directed to put a stop to the practice," he commanded.

1,000 Expected at Banquet Honoring Archbishop Curley

Chairman Makes Optimistic Report to Committee of Retreat League.

More than 1,000 members of the League of Laymen's Retreat are expected to attend the league's subscription banquet in honor of Archbishop Michael J. Curley at the Mayflower Hotel Wednesday evening, at 7 o'clock, Gerald Walsh, chairman of the invitation committee, stated yesterday.

Walsh reported to an executive meeting of the banquet committee that approximately 1,000 responses to invitations can be anticipated from subscriptions to date.

About 100 parish priests from the District of Columbia and nearby towns are expected to attend.

THE NEW WEEK'S BILLS

FOX

By NELSON B. BELL.

It is a bitter picture of the cruel causes and cataclysmic effects of the revolt of the Russian peasantry against the persecutions of the aristocracy that "The Red Dance" paints. It is a vast canvas executed in mighty strokes of vivid color. It is not important that the story is less impressive than the manner of its telling.

It is notorious that my warm and unaccountable prejudice holds Dolores Del Rio in light esteem as an actress, yet in the role of Tasia, the orphaned peasant who became a great artiste of the Moscow Theater and saved her lover, the handsome young Grand Duke Eugene from the firing squad, I almost am willing to like her. Charles Farrell, as the youthful aristocrat so fortunate as to profit by such a love, loses nothing in a less fruitful part than those afforded him in "Seventh Heaven," "Street Angel" and "Pasli," and Ivan Linow, a large body of man almost completely surrounded by cauliflower ears and broken noses, is heroically effective as the uncouth Red who also loves Tasia and comes into unaccustomed power just in time to help her save his rival's life. A horde of supporting players, of whom Andre de Segurola is by far the most competent, people scenes of majestic proportions in which, for once, the savagery of the proletariat, wild with the lust for plunder, arson and murder, is made thrillingly realistic.

In fact, Raoul Walsh has done a thoroughly workmanlike job of directing throughout. The amazing scenes of the tortuous dungeons of the political prison, though brief, are dismally eloquent of misery and the contrasting episodes in the palace of the czar, where Rasputin wields his eerie power, are visualized with no less efficient apprehension of essential detail. The picture is in the grand manner and, to me, considerably better balanced than Barrymore's "Tempest," which it much resembles and far exceeds in magnitude, if not individual performance.

Of the stage portion of the bill, "A Night in Granada," not so much can be said. Yesterday afternoon's performance, I regret to report, was decidedly ragged and in no way aided by the clearly audible remonstrances of Mr. Brustloff when his wires became crossed with those of the master of ceremonies and nobody seemed to know who was coming on next. The revue is participated in by Stafford Pemberton and his partner, Miss Helbig, in a tango; Dolores Cordova, in a castanet dance; White and Manning, burlesque fandangoists; Lawrence Downey and the ballet girls and the Three Visiting Firemen, comedy acrobats.

The two-part overture serves to introduce Stella Powers, coloratura soprano, in the "b" number, which was rousingly applauded. The Fox Movietone News is notable for three especially interesting subjects—the dirigible Los Angeles anchoring to and taking off from the mooring mast of a ship at sea, the stars of the New York poultry show and a Movietone recording a radio message from Commander Byrd in the Antarctic—so the man said!

COLUMBIA

To catch the significance of "Wings," to appraise its value among camera records, it may be worth while to think forward 50 or 100 years, especially if wars are really over or if "the next one" is successfully long deferred. To those who look back from such a period, the sacrifices and heroism of the war birds will have taken on a romantic glamour that we of today can realize but dimly. This really wonderful picture, planned and achieved by men who lived in the reality of war in the air, will then have a priceless interest if celluloid only lasts as long as is hoped for it.

No one is advised, however, to wait 50 years before seeing it. This week at the Columbia would be better, if you can squeeze your way to a vacant single. The amazing facts of warfare in the sky, developing only a dozen years after men first began to soar, are set out in a way to stir the dullest imagination. There is no undue sentimentalizing of this warfare. The grimness, the horror, the moral drain of the air warrior's life have not been minced. The unescapable beauties of flight and the heroic devotion that made aces what they were are just as necessarily remembered.

Enthusiasm centers on the pictures of flight and warfare as such. The story of "Wings" is not quite adequate to the theme. Probably the spectators of 50 years hence will have a smile for its simplicities. One wonders if they will have a fondness for Clara Bow. They will like Richard Arlen and Charles Rogers, but will wonder perhaps whether aviators living in the expectancy of death must not have been more self-contained emotionally on its approach or actual arrival.

The synchronized hubbub that goes with the film has the weaknesses of the present stage of that new-born art, and it may be hoped that 50 years will wear it out. Perhaps there is some way to use a rubber eraser on those piercing siren sounds that are alleged to represent the outcry of every plane shot down in flames. If they could be softened somehow, they might be more convincing.

A Movietone News reel, with some silent news pictures, is the only item added to the great feature film. The Columbia orchestra fills in capably the few silent moments of the program.

THE STRAND

"Stolen Sweets," presented by Mr. Joe Catalano, sauntered onto the stage at the Strand Theater last night, opening an engagement which will continue throughout the current week.

The attraction, consisting of 34 scenes, features Harry Levine and Edith Palmer, with a blithesome group of femmes monickered as the "Temptation Chorus" giving motion and a goodly amount of singing to the background.

Individual talents leap forth at times, as when Mr. Levine, laboring under the billing of "The Caruso of Burlesque," sings "Sonny Boy," and when Miss Palmer does a rather ingratiating parade across stage in a flock of black net soon after the opening of the second act.

A lullaby bit by Thelma Lewis, aided by Artie Lewis and Billy Johnson, helped things along quite a bit not long after hostilities are opened. Miss R. Levine, on the schedule as "A Real Vamp," leads several numbers. Anna Marah steps right alongside of the principals when she turns loose with "Big Date."

The show, it seems, could well stand a little more of the old zip, especially at the close of the first act. As a matter of fact and record, the folks seemed mighty worn out last night, as if they had just tumbled from a long train jump or had done a lot of washing and ironing.

But it's entertainment, withal, and that's what it's there for.

BELASCO

"HONEYMOON LANE." Musical comedy book, lyrics and music by Eddie Dowling and James Hanley. Reviewed by J. F. Brady.

"Honeymoon Lane," the musical show which made Kate Smith famous on Broadway several years ago, opened last night at the Belasco, with Miss Smith playing her original part.

Here is a musical show, full of pep, snappy comedy, plenty of songs, but not all put over in good shape. As a whole the Savoyans have added more laurels to their previous successes, with Miss Smith stepping things up to fever heat as the prelude to the "wicked dance" which never happened.

A few parts of the comedy might be cut and the long dialogues of "Tim Murphy" shortened.

This week we see Miss Smith as she is—not black face, as last week. In both her appearances she almost stopped the show. Her personality, voice and dancing feature her success. She really puts jazz on the map in the second act.

The song hit of the show is "Little White House at the End of Honeymoon Lane," sung by Mr. Capron; others were "Head Over Heels in Love," by Mr. Gallagher and Miss Hamilton, and "Gee, But I'd Like to Be Bad," by Mr. Gallagher and Miss Parker.

This week the honors fall to Miss Parker and Mr. Capron, who certainly have put their finest efforts forward with success. Mr. Gallagher as Ted Kleinz, Lee Daley as Matty Pathe, Helen Randolph as Ruth Adams and others all give a most creditable performance.

The set-ups are worthy of note. The dance ensembles, while needing a little more "in unison" are pretty and catchy.

"Honeymoon Lane" is a pretentious undertaking for the Savoyans and it must be said that this company, working hard, have achieved another success.

Miss Smith leaves the Savoyans Friday night, when she will go to Chicago to join the Keith circuit on Sunday. In both "Hit the Deck" the last two weeks and this week in "Honeymoon Lane" her fellow-Washingtonians have evidenced their approval of her work by their hearty applause for encores. An extra matinee is scheduled for Friday.

PALACE

Whatever implausibilities are to be found in "Sins of the Fathers," and there are more than a few, must be laid at the door of the author rather than the star. I have reached a probably tardy conclusion that it is utterly futile to expect to find any imperfection in the work of Emil Jannings. Even in so unworthy a vehicle as "The Street of Sin" he was a thoroughly convincing thug in the role of "Basher Bill;" as the mad czar in "The Patriot" he was nothing less than superb, and now, in a more or less tawdry play, he depicts with minute fidelity and incomparable skill at least four of the seven ages of man.

The present medium for the display of this American-born Teuton's genius for characterization is the story of Wilhelm Spengler, waiter, who becomes proprietor of a German restaurant, goes into bootlegging with the coming of prohibition, does a term in prison for manufacturing poison liquor that blinds his own son, and emerges, finally, an old man, again serving table in a cheap amusement park.

The course of the drama traces the career of the servitor from poverty to wealth and back to poverty again; from comparatively early manhood to old age. Never once during the manifold gradations that mark the progress of the role does a single subtle shading or a single delicate nuance evade the unerring skill of the actor. Always and unvaryingly he is the slow-minded, middle-class foodman, unwittingly injuring those he loves most and prospering those least entitled to his bounty. The part is one that frequently alienates sympathy, but its enactment unfailingly commands admiration.

Unless I have wholly forgotten the type of artistry that distinguished her work as an associate of the late Henry Miller, Ruth Chatterton has undergone a terrific metamorphosis, or else is even more the consummate artiste than I had suspected. She portrays the waitress-adventuress, who supplants "Mama" Spengler, when Wilhelm becomes prosperous through the illicit traffic in poisonous beverages, with a repellant brazenness, a shocking indelicacy and a flair for infidelity that seem completely at odds with the activities with which her name has always been associated on the stage. Zasu Pitts contributes an entirely pathetic delineation of the overworked mother, and Mathew Betz, Jack Luden, Barry Norton, Jean Arthur and numerous others magnify the importance of contributory parts.

Organ recessional, orchestral prelude, dancing prologue, M-G-M and Fox Movietone newsreels and a pictorial novelty that should be named "Fowl Play," but isn't, help make it a generous bill.

METROPOLITAN

"ABIE'S IRISH ROSE." A Paramount sound-picture version of Anne Nichol's play, directed by Victor Fleming and featuring Joan Hersholt, Nancy Carroll and Charles (Buddy) Rogers. Reviewed Saturday afternoon by Mary Porter Russell.

It is absurd to find crowds streaming into the Metropolitan at the odd hour of 5:30 and to fight one's way with them into an already full house. You would have thought so yourself. Hadn't "Abie's Irish Rose" been played on the stage to the threadbare limit and wasn't every one in the world familiar with its entire anatomy?

Only one conclusion seemed logical. Most of these people had seen the play in years gone by and now were anxious to enjoy the movie. They were like children who find enjoyment of some simple tale enhanced by an ability to anticipate its developments. One was inclined to feel superior.

Then a distinguished looking head, two rows in front, turned slightly to the left and the profile, if you can believe it, was that of a United States senator. Now it isn't natural to feel superior to a senator except, maybe, when he's making a speech. There came the urge to determine what manner of people, on a whole, had flocked in to see this admittedly low-brow play, and an eye-tour of inspection was forthwith begun, though it failed lamentably to accomplish its purpose. Whether they were important or not, these seekers of what the film could give, seemed so trivial a thing after witnessing their expressions. Glad, they were, then sad, but always interested. The woman to the right gave a funny little squeal of delight just at the point Miss Nichols had meant her to be delighted. A moment later, the senator was seen making industrious use of his handkerchief and, although he may only have had a cold, it happened at the exact instant Miss Nichols had meant him to be sad.

After that, I didn't notice the people any more. I was looking at the screen, and something seemed always to be going on, so that I couldn't look away again.

The picture delves considerably further back into the life of Abie than does the play. We see him as an infant, as a little boy, then as a soldier, marching off to a conventional movie war, where Rosemary, the little Irish girl from the U. S. A., sings her way into his heart. From then on the stage version is followed with almost unprecedented fidelity. There are the fathers, the Jewishest and the Irishest it would be possible to find; the Cohens, including the appendix that isn't; the fine old rabbi and the lovable priest; the lovers themselves and the baby, that turns out to be twins.

It is a theatrical affair, of course, crammed with tricks of the trade and with situations obviously constructed to bring forth the laughs and the tears. But it is human, too, and good humored and kind, and as tolerant of all religions as it would teach mankind to be.

Charles Rogers and Nancy Carroll make appealing young lovers; their fathers are played with relish by Jean Hersholt and J. Farrell MacDonald; Bernard Gorcey and Ida Kramer decorate the Cohen roles, as they did on the stage, and Camillus Pretal and Nick Cogley do the priest and the rabbi.

The talking confines itself to a dramatic death prayer in the guttural Hebrew of Jean Hersholt, but there is sound in abundance in the theater both from the synchronized accompaniment and from the audience, the reactions of the latter striking one's ears with such precision as to leave the effect of additional synchronization.

EARLE

When Ralph Graves discovered that Dorothy Revier, his erstwhile inamorata, was the wife of Jack Holt, his best friend, and slapped her face vigorously in token of her duplicity, I imagined it might sting a little but could perceive no reason for her falling limply to the floor as if shot through the heart. It was the only moment during a tense afternoon when I felt any fear for the rationality of what turned out to be one of the most engrossing melodramas recently seen on any local screen.

"Submarine," in its purely romantic moments, and those dedicated to a breezy type of comedy, is perhaps best comparable to "A Girl in Every Port" in general tenor. The two sailor pals call each other some unpleasant names, if you are good at lip reading, and get into many lusty fights in various parts of the world and are separated only by orders from the Navy Department assigning them to different details. One of them, Mr. Holt, gets married, and in course of time his side-kick comes to town to complete the old, familiar domestic triangle in which, just this once, the woman is the rotter. But, as I say, that is not so important as the exciting business that takes place at sea when the boys are on duty.

These Navy sequences, obviously made with the cooperation of the United States naval establishment, it seems to me, who have never been in the Navy, are extraordinarily effective. The submarine numbering among its crew the buddy whom the deep-sea diver believes he has deserted his boat, is sunk in 400 feet of water and rescued, but the injured husband is able to make so great a depth with an air line, and he won't. It is here that the picture takes on every aspect of actuality by visualizing many of the terrifying details of submarine catastrophes that are of authentic record in the Navy Department. The scenes depicting the agonizing helplessness of the crew imprisoned on the floor of the ocean are as harrowing as anything you will be apt to see. When Mr. Holt learns the truth about his wife, Miss Revier comes out of hiding and takes off for the scene of the wreck in plane No. 8 from the U. S. S. Saratoga, you will be tempted to stand right up and cheer, the drama of the situation is that taut.

Jack Holt and Dorothy Revier contribute excellent performances, but Ralph Graves—whom I like for the first time ever—Clarence Burton and Arthur Rankin, by the very nature of their predicament, make a much deeper and more sympathetic impression upon the mind of the spectator. They are the ones brought face to face with the grim spectre of death.

Many inspiring views of the Navy in action are woven logically into the pictured drama. The accompaniment, recorded by Victor, is open to criticism only by reason of an interpolated theme song when an invisible singer is wholly out of consonance with the scene.

The supplementaris include two Vitaphone subjects—Joseph Regan, lyric tenor, and Jane Green, "The Melody Girl"—the "Topical Review" and Mickey Mouse in "Plane Crazy," another hilariously funny synchronized cartoon comedy.

NATIONAL

E. M. Newman, globe trotter extraordinary, minister of travel, and rambler of romantic lands, opened his twentieth season of lectures in the National Theater yesterday afternoon, showing pictures of Morocco and Algiers, under the title, "Gardan of Allah."

Divided into two parts, the Newman lecture was more than comprehensive; taking in many quarters of a land little known to Americans, save those adventurous spirits who rove or those who are stationed in far-off countries. Mr. Newman's collection of pictures contains many that are unique and unusual. He delivered his lecture with intelligent understanding and with sympathetic feeling.

Starting at Tangiers, Newman wandered with his audience to Mazagan and then farther south, showed the narrow streets of Marrakech and interesting studies of the people who dwell in Morocco. All in all, a good start for a series of lectures that will include, as it goes along, Spain, Germany, England and Scotland, with a special lecture devoted to London.
